Mifflin Co. Correspondent

STRODES MILLS (Mifflin Co.) — "Everything goes better when we work together," said Joanne Yoder of Strodes Mills, Mifflin County.

Working together is a necessity when this family takes eight Holsteins to the Farm Show. It becomes critical when all 11 children are involved!

Lee D. and Joanne Yoder have instilled the philosophy of working together in their children (ages 20 years to 20 months) at home and then take it with them wherever they go.

"I make the Farm Show a family thing. I try to keep as many of them with me as I can. I like it because it's something the whole family is involved in and there is a lot of learning going on. The children learn responsibility."

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The state Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg has received some fresh paint, including some wall murals, and other improvements, and Farm Show staff have made some fine-tuning adjustments to the layout and programs offered at the 1997 Farm Show which should add to the festivity and excitement for exhibitors and visitors to the annual state fair.

Open to the public starting tomorrow, Jan. 11, through Thursday, Jan. 16, organizers of the state's premier farming showcase event anticipate a great show with competitive animal and commodity contests; interesting educational, equipment and supply exhibits; a variety of fresh, prepared foods from Pennsylvania's various commodity organizations; and demonstrations of Pennsylvania's farming culture — folk dancing, hitched-horse competitions, food preparations, material and

Land 'O Lakes, Atlantic Co-ops Closer To Merger

A possible merger between the Land 'O Lakes cooperative and the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative (ADC) was discussed at the ADC annual meeting in November, though it was more described at the time as discussions toward developing a closer working relationship.

While a news release this week announced the two boards'

JANUARY 08, 1997

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was light and selective, and generally centered on limited supplies of 2.5 pound sizes. 3 pound and heavier sizes were readily available and slow to clear. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights varied, but were often noted as heavier than desired. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than truckiot asking prices were unchanged at 66 to 80 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to weak. In the parts complex, boneless skinless breasts were adequate to fully adequate. Bone-in breasts were in good balance. Most leg items were available and slow in clearing. Wings were in tight supply.

Truckiot buying activity was spotty with dealers extremely cautious and very selective. Offerings were difficult to place on dark meat, becoming more available on boneless skinless breast with bone-in breasts and wings the only items currently showing any interest. Retail and distributive movement was sluggish with most dealers looking ahead for an improved call. The market tone was barely steady to weak.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Tue, January 07, 1997
USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Cold weather conditions return for most of the US, offering support to grain and soybean bids. Gains were limited, however, by continued lack of foreign sales this week. Wheat 2 to 8 cents higher. Corn 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 2 to 4 cents higher. Soybeans 3 to 6 cents higher. Winterkill threats in winter wheat areas continue to push wheat bids higher as temperatures are forecast to drop drastically. Corn and soybean bids were stronger due to higher wheat bids. Traders await Friday's USDA reports. Reports of hot, dry weather in parts of Brazil added support to bean bids.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

PLOUGH MONDAY, JAN. 13.

"BEST THING SINCE SLICED BREAD"

January 18, 1943, was when the sale of sliced bread was discontinued until the end of World War II. How much of a hardship was it? Prices had been going up and up, despite the scarcity of butter. (Most butterfat was being diverted to the manufacture of cheese.) Margarine was subject to a ten percent tax if it was artificially colored, so more and more Americans colored their own with vegetable dyes or used it white. Sliced bread had been around for only about a dozen years, first introduced by the Wonder Bread company of Battle Creek, Michigan, in 1930. Consumers were wary at first; sliced bread went stale quicker. But the convenience caught on Man does not live by bread alone, even pre-sliced bread.

– Denis William Brogan (1944 The American Character")

TIP OF THE WEEK

Buy a serrated bread knife, and let the loaf cool slightly before you slice it.

LEMON WALNUT BREAD

- 1/2 cup (1 stick) butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 2 scant cups flour, sifted
- 1 scant tablespoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/3 cup fresh lemon juice
- 1/2 cup buttermilk
- 1 cup chopped walnuts

Preheat oven to 350° F. Cream the butter and sugar, add the eggs, and beat. Sift dry ingredients into this and add lemon juice and buttermilk. Beat just enough to mix, then add nuts. Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake 50 to 60 minutes. Cool on a rack. Makes 1 loaf.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Always expect a thaw in January.

January thaw, July freshet.

Cumulus clouds smaller at sunset than at noon are signs of continued fair weather.

Did You Know?

University tests and tens of 1,000s of satisfied dairy producers have proven isolation calf housing, hutches, are absolutely the best way to raise healthy calves Progressive dairy producers do not sacrifice calf health for personal convenience.

Calf-tel is the only thermoformed hutch. Thermoforming is a process that imparts strength to the polymer like forging does to steel. Rotocasting, a process used by all other plastic hutch manufacturers, creates a weaker, less durable product that is prone to cracking.

Calf-tel is the only hutch manufactured with completely opaque material to effectively eliminate the green house effect. This heat trapping effect overheats calves when temperatures climb above 80° F and also causes uncontrollable temperature swings daily when temperatures drop below freezing. Over 100,000 Calf-tels are helping raise healthier, growthier calves worldwide from Florida through the sunbelt to California.

Washington across the dairy belt to New England and in 20 foreign countries

Calf-tel is the only hutch made of high molecular weight polyethylene plastic with a high load UV blocking pigment. This quality material enables Hampel Corp. to warranty Calf-tel for ten years, the longest in the calf hutch industry.

Long after competitive hutches are discarded, used Calf-tels sell from $125 to $200 each–even after ten years of use. Such a high residual value decreases cost per hutch to as low as $12 per year.

When operator comfort is a concern, creative dairy producers have provided covered service alleys or placed Calf-tels in two or three sided shelters during inclement times.

International Day: Is It Serving The Purpose?

The annual treck to the Harrisburg Farm Show is about to begin for farmers across Pennsylvania. Of course, many visitors from neighboring states come as well.

The show that provides the focal point of the state's $43.7 billion industry is scheduled for January 11 to 16 in the Farm Show Building on Cameron Street. This year again a great deal of attention will be focused on foreign visitors who may become buyers of exported products from our local farmers.

At last count there were over 100 of these representatives coming from 23 countries. What makes this an improvement over last year is the fact that many of this years' foreign visitors represent companies and organizations that are in the exporting business. It is good public relations to invite the heads of state like they did last year, but now it is time to get down to business.

The main event of the International Day will be held in Hershey at the convention center with 90 exhibitors providing samples of their products to the foreign visitors. Then these guests will be feted at the annual Farm Show dinner in the evening. On Saturday the foreign visitors will be free to roam the Farm Show complex to pick and choose the things they want to see. They should get a great education.

This effort to use the Farm Show as an international showcase for Pennsylvania agriculture is a great effort by many people. However, officials report they will take a look at the effectiveness of the event later this year to see if it has been productive. We think this shows good management on the part of the persons involved. To continue a program that does not bring results would be counterproductive. We believe the bottom line for continuing International Day at the Farm Show should revolve around bottom line issues. Did the companies who participated make any export sales as a result of this effort?

To us, it makes a lot of sense to have an International Day at the Farm Show, especially when it is put in the framework of accountability to show if the event is serving the purpose for which it was inaugurated.

To Register Water Use

Farming operations in the Susquehanna River Basin that use more than 10,000 gallons of water per day over a 30-day period need to register that use with the Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC) by March 31, 1997.

There are no registration fees. Registering can strengthen your legal position in future water disputes, factor in your water needs during drought, and assist the SRBC in making sound management decisions regarding water use.

Farms using less than 10,000 gallons per day but would like to have the advantages of registration may do so voluntarily. Farms with 200 cows, 2,000 feeder pigs, 900 sows, 125,000 laying hens, 250,000 broilers or pullets, or 100,000 turkeys without any other animals or crops, will probably need to register.

Commercial irrigation of cropland is probably over the threshold. If you did not receive forms in the mail, you may call John Graham, SRBC, Harrisburg at (717) 238-0425.

To Prepare For Government Inspections

The past two weeks I have read articles where large agriculture firms have paid big environmental fines.

The rules are changing as we increase the productivity on our farms. Society is beginning to take another look at agriculture and farmers and placing the same environmental and safety standards as they place on other industries.

Farmers should take warning from these recent fines and do an environmental and safety inspection on their farms and start correcting deficiencies. Areas to look at include manure storages, manure spreading practices, barnyard runoff, and waste disposal methods including plastic, pesticide containers, syringes, and oil.

Also, look for unsafe conditions and practices. Worker safety including family labor must take a high business priority on the farm. Accidents will trigger government inspections and possible fines.

Prevention of problems is not a very glorious and thankful job, but top managers prevent problems. By preventing problems you create a pleasant work environment, produce a quality product, operate an ethical business, and reduce the possibility of government interference.

To Know Minimum Wage Requirements

Pennsylvania exempts agriculture from the minimum wage ($4.75 per hour currently and $5.15 per hour on Sept. 1, 1997) and from overtime pay requirements (one and one half times the regular rate of pay when an employee exceeds 40 hours work in a single week).

However, federal agricultural exemptions for minimum wage are restricted to employers who do not exceed 500 man days of labor in a three-month period. In addition, the federal agriculture exemption for overtime is restricted to normal farming activities and work incidental to those activities performed only for the farmer/employer.

If, for example, the employee packs any eggs not produced by the employer, the agricultural exemption does not apply. In another example, a farm employee was not considered an agricultural exempt employee any week in which the employee filled the soda machine.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

I felt a response to the "Dairy Farmers Want Immediate Answers" — PRO AG article of Saturday, December 28, 1996 was necessary.

As I read the article, the picture left in my head was of the stereotypical welfare recipient. What business does the government have supporting dairy farmers? We all know the history of milk price supports. My point is, this is now.

I believe the major outlet for north Pennsylvania milk is the manufacture of cheese. Cheese is not extremely perishable, therefore these producers are competing on the world market. When some countries can produce milk at ½ the cost of U.S. dairies, we ought to be grateful transportation costs are high.

The problem is not inaction by some government. We can all recall two different plans in the near past to reduce cow numbers. The problem is too much milk!! A milk shortage is what this country needs to get its priorities straight.

We live under a capitalist economic system. When the price of steel went to historical lows, did dairy farmers unite saying they would gladly pay higher machinery costs so American firms would stay at previous levels? How many dairypersons own foreign manufactured automobiles, appliances or are stock holders in foreign ventures? The only difference between these businesses and dairying is the perishability of the product. If you do not produce for a fluid market, which has a definite volume limit, you are at the mercy of the world economy.

I offer a solution. If each dairyperson would slaughter ½ of their cows, the price of milk would go above $30.00 immediately. As long as dairypersons are unwilling to take action to solve their own problems how can they expect non-farmers to care what happens to them?

"PUTTING ON THE DOG!"
January 12, 1997

Background Scripture:
Luke 10:38-42; John 12:1-8
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 27:1-6

Just a few weeks ago I stood at the place in Bethany where tradition tells us was the house in which Mary, Martha and Lazarus entertained Jesus and where Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead. Today, the village hears the Arabic name el-Azariyah, preserving the ancient Greek Lazarion, "The place of Lazarus," by which it was known as early as the 3rd century A.D. The name Bethany means "the house of poverty" and, in fact, the village today is one of poverty-stricken Palestinians.

The church that stands there today is reputedly on the site of Lazarus' tomb and one can still see traces of the original 4th century church built there, as well as of the subsequent Byzantine and Crusader structures. On the exterior wall of the modern church are appealing mosaics depicting Mary, Martha and Lazarus.

Although the emphasis in Bethany is upon the dramatic raising of Lazarus, I could not help but recall the other gospel remembrances of Martha and Mary and what they teach us about following Christ.

SIDING WITH MARTHA

I particularly recall the story of Martha and Mary in Luke 10 because my initial reaction in reading this story was one of siding with Martha. I could very well identify with her complaint, "Lord, do you not care that my sister has left me to serve alone. Tell her then to help me." (Lk. 10:40). Is there anything half so aggravating as trying to entertain an important personage and having to do all the work myself while others who could help are goofing off! After all, Martha, Mary and Lazarus are entertaining the Messiah. Is it not an act of devotion to him to be about the details of cooking, serving and hosting him?

One of the things I like about Martha is that she doesn't mince words. She doesn't whine about sister Mary; she shoots straight from the apron: "Lord, do you not care . . .?" He may be the Messiah but she is not loathe to tell him what to do: "Tell her then to help me!" In John 11, when Jesus comes to Bethany to console Martha and Mary about Lazarus, we are told, "When Martha heard that Jesus was coming, she went and met him, while Mary sat in the house. Martha said to Jesus, 'Lord, if you had been here my brother would not have died'" (Jn. 11:21). Surely Jesus must have appreciated her gut-level honesty and John tells us: "Now Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus" (11:5).

Jesus' response to this blunt woman is patient and loving: "Martha, Martha, you are anxious and troubled about many things; one thing is needful. Mary has chosen the good portion, which shall not be taken away from her" (Lk. 10:41). Gently, he tries to teach her that, although he understands her concerns, she needs to profit by her sister's example in choosing to listen to Jesus rather than try to impress him.

THE BETTER PART

Ouch! That gentle rebuke wounds me as much as it does Martha, I, too, get lost in a maze of efforts and desires, losing sight of "the better part," that which should claim my highest loyalty and commitment. There were too many times in my work as a pastor that I was "distracted with much serving." And for the same reason as Martha — because I wanted to impress someone with my hospitality or my serving. All of us need to be good hosts for the sake of our guests, but, if we plan to entertain too lavishly, it may be for ourselves, not our guests, that we are working. Relationships are more important than things and our relationship with Jesus most of all.

Sometimes even our busyness for Christ may get in the way of our choosing "the better part." Instead of taking up our cross, we may simply be putting on the dog!

Thank You Farmers For Giving Us Support. We Need More Tobacco.

"Farmers"

Maybe we should explain why the auction started in PA Twelve years ago a group of 609 tobacco buyers came to PA to buy on the farm They paid 1 25/lb while their competion paid 1 30/lb country buying Then the 609 buyers started receiving tobacco, things went O K on the 1 25/lb buyer In a short time the 1 30/lb buyer had no place to deliver his tobacco in the south and could no longer honor his contracts Farmers began delivering 1 30/lb tobacco to the 1 25/lb buyer He said he had no place to go with that tobacco but spent his own money, telling the farmer that tobacco is worth 25-50¢/lb The farmer sold — he had no where else to go A big let down

That's when a group of PA farmers began meeting and the idea of auction developed At that time it seemed there was very good farmer support for auction After 11 years in business the farmer support has declined Why!? Should we stay in auction or not? In order for auction to stay in business at our commission rate, we need more volume we have good buyer support but need more tobacco Demand is strong

SRBC Meeting Jan. 16 In Harrisburg

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Susquehanna River Basin Commission has scheduled its next meeting for 9 a.m., Jan. 16, at its Harrisburg SRBC Headquarters Building, at 1721 N. Front St.

The independent regional authority — comprised of members from Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency — meets regularly at different locations throughout the Susquehanna River Basin.

The Thursday meeting in Harrisburg happens to also fall on the last day of the state Farm Show, held at the Farm Show Complex, located just east of the SRBC headquarters building.

The SRBC has authority and resonsibility to manage and protect the flows of the Suquehanna River and all its tributaries.

Though not detailed in a news release made recently, at the Jan. 16 meeting the SRBC is to consider a proposed policy concerning the diversion of water out of the Susquehanna River Basin and to make it an amendment to the SRBC Comprehensive Plan.

Approval is being sought to present the proposed policy for a public hearing.

Also on the agenda for the meeting is a presentation of staff goals for the second half of fiscal year 1997 and a review of accomplishments made since the fiscal year began.

Also to be considered are water withdrawal and other water project applications processed by SRBC staff since the last commission meeting.

Specifically, the SRBC is to consider a request by IBM Corp. to withdraw up to 30,000 gallons of water per day from wells No. EN-219 and EN-89, located in the village of Endicott, in Broome County, New York.

Additional reports to the commission are to concern the hydrologic conditions of the Susquehanna River Basin; highlights of staff reports; a look at the SRBC's 1996 25th anniversary events; a progress report on the implementation of the SRBC's strategic plan; and a background report on New York state environmental bond legislation.

Farm Show Competition Means More Than Ribbons For Stoltzfus Family

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — After months of conditioning her steers and exercising her Dorsets, 16-year-old Jessica Stoltzfus will find out how her pampered pets compare with others across the state at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

"I'm a perfectionist and my standards get higher and higher every year," said this Farm Show veteran.

Nonetheless, she knows that even if you put forth your best effort, you don't always win.

"Sportsmanship is all about losing gracefully. It's part of life. You don't always get what you deserve," said Jessica's older brother Jason, who showed livestock 11 years at county and state levels.

As as college sophomore, Jason won't be competing at Farm Show, but he does hope to slip away from nearby Messiah College for a few hours to help Jessica with the behind-the-scenes work of having animals at the Farm Show.

While Jessica has always been partial to sheep and has been known to fall asleep with them in the pen, that doesn't mean she doesn't become attached to her steers.

"I try hard not to, but I get all choked up when it's time to sell them," she said.

The whole Stoltzfus family has been involved in the 4-H program for at least 11 years.

The siblings' dad Frank was involved in showing animals through 4-H and FFA when he was young.

Although his wife Irene raised sheep during her growing up years, she never participated in competition.

Frank said of the reason he pushed to have his children become involved in showing animals was from his own experience. "I knew what farm youth clubs could do because FFA and 4-H were a good influence on me. I think farm kids get a good meaning of what it means to work for a living. They see the production end unlike many others because most jobs are service and not production."

Jessica agrees with her dad's assessment. She said, "It's nice to live on a farm. It's taught me responsibility even though I get tired of it sometimes, I still need to get it done."

Responsibility is often learned through mistakes. Jessica said that she had all the forms filled out to enter KILE this year, but forget to mail the forms until the deadline was past.

"If you don't take care of it, you pay for it later," she said of her disappointment in missing the deadline.

For 11 years, the Stoltzfuses live on the grounds of Masonic Homes in E-town, where Frank is ag production supervisor for 1,450 acres, 120 milking cows, 100-head of beef, and the 150-sow farrow-to-finish operation. Since rules prohibit raising personal animals on the Masonic Farm grounds, eight years ago the Stoltzfuses purchased a 9-acre farm about three miles from where they live.

On their Oak Meadows Farm, they have a 1,500-head finishing hog unit. They converted the two-story chicken house on the property into a sheep barn where they raise about 27 ewes and rams. During the lambing season, the number increases by about 30 head.

Irene is primarily responsible for the hog finishing care. The family previously contracted hogs, but now are independent.

With this past year's high corn prices, Frank figures that they ended up with about as much profit as if they had been under contract. "But the potential for higher profit is there if we stick in it for the long run," he said.

Not living where they raise their animals causes some difficulty during bad weather. Last year the family used a snowmobile to reach the farm. The tenants at the farm also fed the animals during the height of the storm.

The Stoltzfus family got involved in sheep raising before their children were old enough to join 4-H. When Jason was 4 or 5 years old, his grandmother gave him two lambs. At that time, the family lived on the family's Elverson farm in Chester County. At first they kept the lambs tied to a cinder block, which could be easily moved from spot to spot. Later, they purchased about 10 ewes to keep the pasture trimmed.

Through the years, the family has bred their own sheep and have had success with the Dorset breed.

"Dorsets make good mammas," Jessica said.

Her mother oversees most of the birthing during the lambing season, but she isn't one to spend nights in the barn like some people do. "I may do a barn check late at night before going to bed, but mostly the ewes have no problems unlike some other breeds," Irene said.

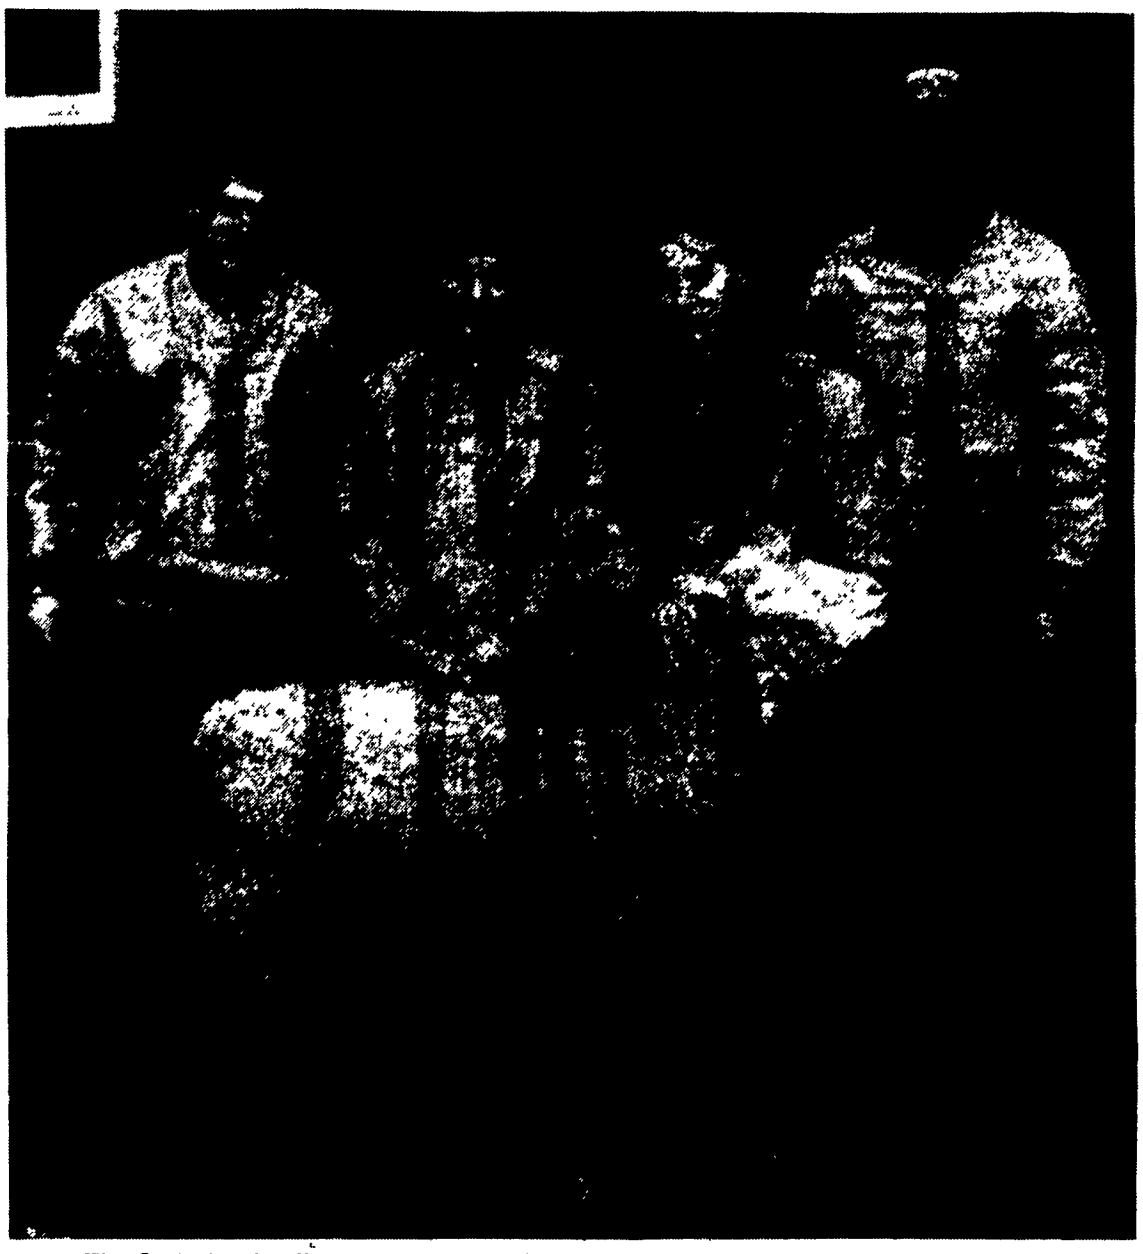
The sheep have access to a three-sided building for shelter while pasturing, but Irene prefers to herd the ewes into the barn before birthing. That doesn't always work out. But the ewes' mothering skills and hardy lambs do well regardless of where birthing takes place.

Lambing season is due to start during Farm Show week, which makes it a hectic time for the family.

While some peers remember the Blizzard of '96 during Farm Show with fondness, Jessica is one of those people who do not. Although she was in a hotel not far from the Farm Show, they were snowed in so badly that they couldn't get out. It took her dad 2½ hours walking through waist-high snow to reach the Farm Show Complex. Jessica and others stranded at the hotel couldn't get there until the following day. In the meantime, hotel guests were entertained by the steer that Jessica attempted to unload from the snowed-under trailer in the hotel parking lot.

"One thing was good about last year," Jessica said of the sparsely attended show after the snowstorm. "No one was in the way. It made it easier for me to run back and forth between the steer and sheep shows."

For months the sheep have been roughly fitted for showing in what is called "slick shear" and "patch shear." This involves shearing out sections and allowing wool to grow where more wool is needed for showing the sheep to its fullest potential. The sheep are slick sheared six weeks in advance of the show and later patch sheared so that other than washing and blending the wool through carding before the show, little is required.



The Stoltzfus family pose with one of Jessica's Dorset. From left are Jason, Irene, Jessica, and Frank. While the goal is to earn a trophy in livestock competition, Jessica knows that putting forth her best effort doesn't guarantee a win. "You don't always get what you think you deserve, but sportmanship is all about losing gracefully," Jason said.

Jessica feeds her flock of Dorset ewes at their Elizabethtown farm. Although the family operates a 1,500-head hog finishing unit, they do not show hogs, but prefer to stick to steers and sheep.

"The older we get, the better we get," Jessica said of Jason's and her fitting skills. "When we look at old pictures, we can see our sheep weren't (fitted) too good."

Jessica is accustomed to peers and strangers often commenting on the whiteness and cleanliness of her sheep. This past year, she felt embarrassed when she rushed her sheep home from the Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) to enter them in Manheim Farm Show.

"I thought my sheep looked dirty and I was so embarrased," Jessica said.

Regardless, the sheep were selected as champions over all breeds. Although proud to win the honor and hold the banner while the media snapped pictures, Jessica felt embarrassed that her sheep didn't meet her showy cleanliness standards.

The two steers that Jessica is raising are an Angus and a Maine-Anjou. In addition to competing in the steer show at the state Farm Show, Jessica will be showing market lambs in youth competition and two ewes in the breeding show.

ATTENTION 609 TOBACCO FARMERS

I am asked by farmers every day, "Why is there Country Buying?" The truth is: there are two places to get tobacco– Auction or Country. If tobacco buyers cannot get their fair share at auction, THEY HAVE TO BUY IN THE COUNTRY. All buyers would like to buy all at auction only, but for some reason, the other auction favors one buyer, even if he pays less money! The farmers can stop the country buying by supporting the fair auction. Farmers Tobacco Whse. realizes that happy buyers will pay the highest prices. This makes farmers happy also, no fuss, no fight. We have the highest prices & averages, paid by the buyers. We sell the most tobacco to the highest bidders. Farmers, please wake up and see what's happening to our auction. We need tobacco at KIRKWOOD. Don't let the other warehouse force country buying to increase! Call me for the truth! Do the farmers want a fair and honest auction or should we shut it down? I lost money in 1996 to provide 609 growers a fair auction. Will you help me now?

That means we must make sure that each buyer can buy tobacco in volume - keeping them in the warehouse is what we want to do. We no longer can move tobacco out the back door to meet minimums.

Foliar Application, Leaf Sorting Contribute To Tobacco Show Success

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — If R. Michael Mellott had a formula for success in growing tobacco, it would include not only using a natural foliar fertilizer, but also taking a lot of time to sort out the best leaves for show.

Perhaps it was a combination of the two that has allowed Mellott to garner top ribbon at the Lancaster County Tobacco Show in the open division for the third year in a row.

Mellott, Quarryville, grows five acres of tobacco — half Pennsylvania 41 and half Maryland 609.

Mellott won grand champion of the open show with his Pa. 41 wrapper. Raymond Rinehart, leaf purchaser with Lancaster Leaf Company and one of the show judges, said that Mellott had a "very good hand of tobacco. There's plenty of life to it, plenty of stretch and plenty of oil in the leaf."

The other show judge was Geoffrey H. Ranck, Domestic Tobacco Company.

Mellott attributes success in growing a champion hand by using a new kind of liquid fertilizer. He used a multimineral, all-natural foliar type, sprayed three times during the season: a week after transplanting, two weeks before topping, and a couple of days after topping.

Mellott noted he had no troubles with etch or mold in the fields. While the wet, cool season challenged a lot of farmers, Mellott believed he was fortunate that dry weather in September helped provide a good crop.

Mellott received a top price of $1.67 per pound for his Maryland 609 variety and a top price of $2.05 per pound from the field that grew the winning hand.

During stripping, Mellott said he keeps track of the nicer leaves. "Those I kept aside as I was sorting through them for the show," he said.

Mellott said that he has lots of help from his wife, Denise, and some part-time hired help.

Grand champion Pennsylvania 41 smoking tobacco vo ag division went to Keith Frey, 18, son of David and Norma Frey, Washington Boro. Keith said he helps his dad farm 40 acres of tobacco and had one grand champion at the Lancaster County Tobacco Show several years ago.

Like Mellott, Frey said that he sorts through a lot of the leaves at stripping and sets the best leaves aside for the show. He said the leaves "were a nice size and uniform," which he believes helped him win the contest.

Some problems Frey experienced during curing included "shed burn" — the leaves developed a type of rot because of the cooler, wet conditions. For the Pennsylvania 41 tobacco, the Freys were able to garner $1.55 per pound. For the Maryland 609 they grow, the Freys received a top price of $1.75 per pound this year.

John Yocum, Penn State Extension Southeast Research Lab manager, indicated that during the past wet growing season, two things concerned growers: one was thinner leaves because of lack of sunlight and, thus, decreased yields. The other was some shed burn because of the moist curing conditions, although a few weeks in

Center For Animal Health And Productivity Faces Challenges Of 21st Century For Pennsylvania Farmers

The Center for Animal Health and Productivity (CAHP) is located at New Bolton Center, the large animal campus of the School of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania and is comprised of faculty members committed to the development of knowledge to improve health and productivity of food animal populations. The CAHP was established in 1986 to develop and implement innovative teaching, research, and service programs for food animal production systems in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

In contrast to traditional veterinary services, the patient of interest for the CAHP is the production system at large (the farm unit), rather than the individual animal. This broader focus at the farm level requires an integrated understanding of nutrition, animal management, decision sciences (the study of how decisions are made and their economic value), epidemiology, reproduction, animal health, and economics. In addition, structural changes in the livestock industries with shifts to more integrated and concentrated systems along with the emerging era of biotechnology and information management have broadened the role veterinarians must play.

A diverse group of faculty is assembled to cope with complex problems confronting animal agriculture and to identify economically efficient solutions to these problems. The identification and ranking of factors which can influence farm profitability and sustainability can only be fully understood through an interactive, interdisciplinary approach. The CAHP is composed of such a faculty with expertise and academic training in such diverse disciplines as nutrition, epidemiology, economics, agronomy, mathematics, pathology and reproduction, to name a few. The CAHP has also developed collaborative relationships at the national and international level with a broad number of scientists and academic groups, thus making it a truly unique institution.

The faculty of the CAHP are often called upon for consultation on emerging health and production problems in livestock production systems throughout the commonwealth. In consultation with the local veterinary practitioner, complex problems on the farm are thoroughly studied and evaluated.

A typical scenario for a case problem would include a visit to the farm to understand the nature of the problem and its relationship to the production system at large. A complete history of the problem is taken along with an evaluation of the production, health, and financial records.

Upon identification of problem areas (nutrition, mastitis, reproduction, culling, nutrient management, primary health care program), intensive evaluations are made and solutions are formulated in consultation with the local practitioner. Problems that appear to be widespread within a livestock industry and of significant economic/social importance to the commonwealth are studied in more detail often in the form of research projects.

Research efforts of the CAHP form a vital and necessary link in the transfer of new information from the biological sciences into economically efficient applications and opportunities at the farm level.

With the focus of the CAHP at the farm system level a variety of problems impacting on farm health and production have become apparent.

Faculty of the CAHP have developed several breeding programs for dairy herds (Target Breeding Program and Milk Progesterone Breeding Program), that integrate the reproductive biology of the cow and farm management into systematic breeding policies. These practical approaches offer economically efficient solutions to reproductive inefficiency problems affecting many dairy herds.

Another example is the emerging concern of nutrient losses to the environment associated with animal agriculture.

In recognition of the importance of this problem, the CAHP has several research projects to investigate the relationship between nutrition and animal management and the efficiency of nutrient capture in farm systems. Improving the efficiency of nutrient utilization within the farm system can significantly reduce nutrient losses to the environment.

By taking a systems approach to this problem, practical and new implementable strategies are emerging that greatly reduce the environmental impact associated with food animal operations. These solutions are imbedded in computer software that can be utilized at the farm level.

The basic product of the CAHP is knowledge. New knowledge is developed in its research programs. We apply and test the knowledge captured in our research efforts through our service programs to local producers, veterinarians, and industry representatives. We communicate knowledge through teaching programs and through the development of computer software that is easily and broadly distributed.

The educational activities of the CAHP include veterinary instruction in production systems medicine as well as post graduate training and continuing education for food animal practitioners. The CAHP participates in continuing education programs such as the Penn Annual Conference, the National Veterinary Practitioners workshops, and courses such as the Dairy Production Medicine Certificate Program presented in cooperation with Penn State University.

The center is developing a joint program with he Pennsylvania Animal Health Commission, Penn State University, and other commonwealth agencies to provide an integrated program of field investigation services and postgraduate training in production medicine.

In cooperation with the Wharton School of Business, faculty at the CAHP are developing an executive MBA training program for veterinarians. This unique program would allow veterinarians the opportunity to get additional special training in decision sciences and business economics with specific applications in animal production systems. With such academic training, these students would be uniquely qualified to understand the underlying biological principles of an animal production system with an economic perspective.

The goal of the Center for Animal Health and Productivity teaching, research, and service is to improve the economic competitiveness of Pennsylvania farms through the generation and implementation of new knowledge and thus ensure their survivability into the 21st century.

Please visit the School of Veterinary Medicine, University of Pennsylvania booth at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show, Jan. 11-16 for more information on the Center for Animal Health and Productivity as well as the many other services, programs, and research the school has to offer. Farm Show Competition Means More Than Ribbons For Stoltzfus Family keep the Suffolk flock because the potential for higher profits was with Jessica's Dorset flock.

"Suffolks are like feeding horses," Frank said. "Also Jessica's Dorsets are competitive at regional levels but the Suffolks were not."

Jason recalls that he was fortunate enough to attain two big rotating trophies the same year. He as named Shepherd of the Year on the county level and won the supreme champion title for his steer at E-town Fair.

The past year has been an outstanding year for Jessica. She entered all the county fairs and never placed lower than second in any of the competitions. She showed the reserve champion breeding sheep at the county 4-H Roundup and the supreme champion sheep at Manheim Farm Show. In addition she placed first in showmanship at every show but one.

Of the many trophies and ribbons won through county showing competitions, Jessica's most exciting moments were showing the supreme champion over all livestock in 1995 at the E-town Fair and being selected the winner of the Intell calf this year.

Ironically, Jason had won the Intell calf during his first year of steer showmanship. He credits that first year success to many years of sheep showmanship.

Jason prefers steers over showing sheep. He said of the costs for raising a beef project, "You put more into it, but you get more out of it."

Jessica and Jason said that a classy steer should have lots of hair. They winter their steers outside to encourage hair growth, but the steers have access to the barn and will come inside if it is really cold.

During the warmer months, they often wet down the steers and run

With The High Costs Of Dry Feeds... Look To Liquids...
Look to Pro-Lix®

- In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game. Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities.
- Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack: protein, energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth.
- For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they'll get to the milking herd on time. If you trust your heifers to forage alone, they might not make it.
- For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth.
- Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation. The Ca:P ration in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever, while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf.

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage, as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix.

The payoff is healthier animals and economical production, all year round!

fans to keep the steers cool.

Finding the right condition for a steer is an ongoing challenge. If the steer feels too fat, they cut down on the corn and feed more oats and vice versa.

"Steers are harder to show because they are so big," Jason said. "The relationship between the cattle and the showman is more important than with sheep. If you put time in ahead of the show, you can tell it."

Farm Show Competition Means More Than Ribbons

"You've got to start from day one with steers," he said. "The older a steer gets the more unruly it becomes and you can get hurt if you haven't been working with it," he said.

Jason knows from experience the importance of working with a steer as soon as possible. One year, he purchased a steer that was older and it was impossible to tame. He forfeited showing the steer because of its wildness even though it was in excellent condition.

The good and bad is taken in stride and nothing is taken for granted. Jason recalls that one of his steers went crazy one year and ran up the alleyway in the barn. This startled the ram who tried to escape out a window. Instead it cut the main artery on its leg and bled to death.

Another year, Jessica was showing her steer which took a first at Manheim and from there went to KILE. "I thought, he looked a bit shaky, but he won a first in the class."

Later the vet prescribed penicillin. The steer broke out in blisters around the tail. The vet thought he was allergic to the adhesive used to prepare the hair for showing.

Although Jessica took the steer home and thought it was recuperating, a few weeks later the steer stopped eating and staggered. It went blind and needed to be put to sleep.

Jessica cried. "He was so docile," she said.

Since then, she has never used that spray.

Another steer was out in pasture. The morning before 4-H Roundup, the steer was found standing in the driveway, its left foot dangling.

"It was the best steer, we ever had," both Jessica and Jason said of the steer that never had a chance to prove its worth.

Fortunately they each raise two steers and the other was readied for showing.

"The replacement steer did better than I expected and got reserve champion," Jason said.

The whole family has nothing but the highest praise for county 4-H clubs.

"Lancaster County is a good, clean club. Everyone helps each other," Jason said.

His dad said, "For me, it's a real joy to participate in a county where we have one of the best livestock extension agents (Chet Hughes). We do not see battling between families and clubs like some do in other areas."

Frank was a former 4-H club leader but needed to give it up because of his work duties. He is chairman of the sheep committee for the E-town Fair.

At Elizabethtown High School, Jessica is on the basketball and track teams and is a member of student council and of varsity club.

When Jessica heads for college, she hopes to continue to supply sheep to kids in 4-H programs.

Jessica and Jason are active in the youth group at the E-town Brethren in Christ Church. Jessica is part of the youth group choir which does some touring. Her brother operates the sound system for the programs.

It was this involvement that steered him in the direction of majoring in communications with an emphasis on television and video repair. After two years at Messiah College in Grathan, Jason will study at Temple University at the Messiah campus in Philadelphia. He is part of a work-study program on campus where he operates sound for campus events.

INTRODUCING FULLTIME
A REVOLUTIONARY NEW FE CAN TURN YOUR HERD INTO

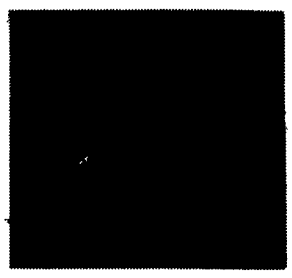
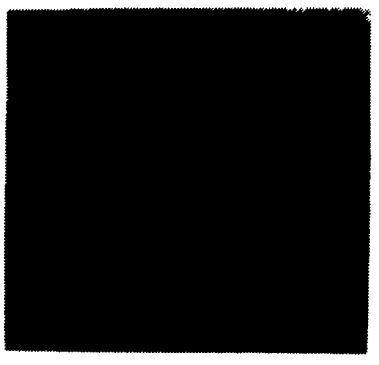
That's right, feed your dairy herd our remarkable new FullTime™ forage, and within a week, you could see results like those at Michigan State University (MSU). Cows fed Cargill's new FullTime forage hybrids on average consumed 8 percent more dry matter, resulting in 5.5 more pounds of milk per cow per day while showing improved body condition.



A Forage Like This Only Comes Around Once In A Blue Moon. There are at least two ways fiber digestibility can improve a cow's performance. One, by increasing the energy density of its diet, and the other, by increasing dry-matter intake. It's these two components working together that explain the remarkable test results with FullTime forage. You see, our new line of FullTime forages contain up to 40 percent less indigestible lignin than traditional hybrids. This means that FullTime forage rates higher in fiber digestibility. That, in turn, contributes to the increase in dry-matter intake of nearly 4½ pounds per cow per day in the MSU trial. By digesting fiber more rapidly and more completely, cows can move feed out of the rumen more quickly and make room for more feed. This translates into more energy for milk production in an optimally balanced ration and is what makes FullTime forage a nutritional breakthrough.



A Better Forage All The Way Around. No longer do you have to deal with the timing or weather issues related to hay crops. Or balance grain yield over forage quality like you do with other hybrids. With FullTime forage you get high-fiber digestibility, low lignin, improved dry-matter intake, better cow performance, and perhaps best of all, a harvest that's only once a year.

approval actions, a schedule for the distribution of the plan and membership votes was not included.

Atlantic is a 3,600-member dairy cooperative headquartered in Southampton, Pennsylvania, that markets and process milk in the Middle Atlantic region.

Land 'O Lakes is a Arden Hills, Minnesota-based food and agricultural cooperative owned by farmers and ranchers, including 3,800 dairy producers and 1,000 member cooperatives in a 19-state region.

ADC does have a booth at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show (Jan. 11-16) in Harrisburg where the public is invited to ask questions about membership. ADC is to set up its booth on the first floor of the Northeast Building in the Farm Show Complex. (See the Farm Show layout map and exhibitor listing on pages E18-19 in this issue of Lancaster Farming.)

The two organizations have been business partners since 1980, when ADC began producing butter for Land 'O Lakes at ADC Holly Milk facility near Carlisle. Today ADC is one of Land 'O Lakes largest members.

In the news release, the chief executive officers of both organizations stated their strong support, and that of their respective boards, for merging.

"This is an exciting opportunity for establishing a new, national organization that is committed to creating value-added markets for members and to delivering cost-effective, on-farm production programs," John E. Gherty, president and CEO of Land 'O Lakes said in the news release.

"We have intensively studied the ways by which we could provide greater long-term value and returns to our members through expanded product manufacturing, creation of a branded, value-added market and access to a wider range of agricultural programs, products and expertise," stated Robert Dever, ADC CEO.

"Our board and management very strongly believe that by mergin with Land 'O Lakes we will achieve each one of these goals."

Both Gherty and Dever said the two cooperatives would provide members with comprehensive information on the proposal prior to a vote on consolidation.

For Sheep Exhibitors, Farm Show Preparation Starts With Fox Terrier

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

ELVERSON (Chester Co.) — Maria and Inez Stoltzfus will take practice any way they can get it.

Several years ago, Maria and her sister took their fox terrier, "Toots," out of the pen and pretended to wash and clip it — all in a concerted (though imagined) effort to make it grand champion sheep.

"We'd pretend to show and fit it," Maria says, glancing at Inez while both tried to stop laughing. "We'd bring it out and try to act like we were washing it and everything."

"But her hair was too short," replied Inez, giggling.

How did their dog place?

"I'm sure it always won," Inez said.

In the end, according to the Stoltzfus family, even though Toots escaped the pen, Inez said the terrier "never tried to bite us or anything."

For years, while growing up on the family 10-acre farmette in Elverson, the Stoltzfus sisters watched as their brother and sister, Hans and Kendra, exhibited champion sheep. Maria and Inez, who care for almost a dozen sheep, admitted they had a yearning to exhibit in the show ring — not just in shepherd's competition (which both have done several times at Farm Show) but in the junior market lamb show.

This year will be the first for Maria and Inez at the junior market lamb show on Wednesday at the Farm Show.

Maria, 15, and Inez, 17, are daughters of Carl and Hilda Stoltzfus in Elverson. For years they've been exhibiting at the Chester County 4-H Market Lamb Show and Sale as well as the Goshen and Kimberton fairs. This is their first time to exhibit at Farm Show.

Maria, a sophomore at Conestoga Christian School, will be exhibiting Abby, a Suffolk crossbred ewe, purchased from Ken Smoker in Lancaster. Abby weighed in at approximately 117 pounds this week and will most likely show in the medium weight division at Farm Show.

Inez, a senior at Conestoga Christian School, will be exhibiting Sammy, a purebred Montadale ram weighing 130 pounds, in the heavyweight division. The Montadale was purchased from Cheryl Fairbairn, Chester County livestock agent.

Maria said the name "Abby" was chosen for her Suffolk ewe because "I guess I heard it somewhere and I thought that's a cute name for a sheep."

Maria said that when she purchased Abby, "I was surprised at how gentle she was and everything. She doesn't mind me too much, either, because I go in there and put the halter on and walk her all around, and she doesn't really like that. Now she runs from me when I go in the barn. She's pretty gentle, though she can be stubborn. They're all pretty stubborn sometimes."

As for Sammy, Inez's Montadale ram, "Well, he's pretty good, he's pretty tame," she said. "He doesn't like me right now because I've been leading him around and trying to get him halter-trained and stuff. He's kind of mad at me. But he's been pretty gentle and he cooperates."

Older sister Kendra, 21, who will soon embark to Albania with husband Dwayne as part of a church ministry, began showing when she was eight years old. She was given a Hampshire ewe lamb.

She showed sheep at the Farm Show in 1983-1984.

"I didn't do real well," she said. "But it was a good learning experience. I didn't have real high quality — my sheep wasn't real high quality. But it was a very good experience for me. I learned a lot."

What Kendra learned about Farm Show was "the importance of being fair," she said. Kendra's last year of showing was 1993 when she won champion market lamb in the county.

Maria Stoltzfus, right, a sophomore at Conestoga Christian School, will be exhibiting Abby, a Suffolk crossbred ewe, at the Farm Show. Abby weighed in at approximately 117 pounds this week and will most likely show in the medium weight division. Inez, a senior at Conestoga Christian School, will be exhibiting Sammy, a purebred Montadale ram weighing 130 pounds, in the heavyweight division.

The past several years, Inez and Maria have been competing in the shepherd's contest, which involves taking a "raw" lamb from the pen, cleaning it, clipping it, and making it presentable for a show. A portion of that involves answering questions, such as equipment, feed, or other items used in raising sheep. Inez said the contest "tests your total ability and knowledge about sheep."

"You judge some wool sometimes," said Maria.

"And to be able to get in to the Farm Show with that kind of competition, you have to do well in the county," said their mother, Hilda.

Kendra said that the family has been "focused more on breeding for market all along, rather than show. That's what we have poured a lot of our energies into."

Kendra said that Maria's line of sheep have done the best overall in market competition.

Hilda Stoltzfus said that "we always had a flock of sheep at home."

Maria and Inez are excited about this year's Farm Show.

"I thought it would be fun," Inez said. "I thought it would be a good experience to go up there."

Inez said she never watched a market lamb show at the Farm Show before, but she expects tough competition. Maria said she wants to go to Farm Show for the experience. "I'm not expecting to do real well," she said. However, she hopes to see good prices paid for the lambs.

The sisters are taking time away from school, from serving on student council and school choir, to attend Farm Show. They also are active in their youth group at Hopewell Mennonite Church. Inez serves on the high school yearbook staff.

"We've always wanted to go. But our ewes lamb in February and so that would be too early to have them, so then we had to go buy them."

Maria has taken her lambs into elementary school to show them to a class. She recently gave a presentation to her 10th grade English class on what it's like to raise sheep.

"I just gave a presentation a couple of weeks ago," Maria said. "It was an expository speech and I demonstrated how to fit a sheep."

Maria spoke about the importance of clipping before the summer heat sets in, which can pose a health challenge to sheep that aren't clipped.

One question Maria fielded: had she ever nicked a sheep while cutting off the wool?

"Sometimes you cut it a little bit, but I never cut it bad," she said.

Maria kept a ewe lamb, Tina, a Suffolk crossbred, which she intends to show at the county sheep roundup.

Indiana County Families Come To Farm Show

RANDY WELLS
Indiand Co. Correspondent

MARION CENTER (Indiana Co.) — A sizable contingent of Indiana County farm families will be among the exhibitors, participants and spectators at the 81st Farm Show set to open Saturday, Jan. 11 in Harrisburg.

For some, it would not be January without an adventuresome trip over wintry highways to the nation's largest indoor agricultural exposition. Others are looking forward to their first Farm Show experience.

Jerry Ray of Shelocta, plans to travel east with at least six of his Belgian draft horses to compete in several classes, including all the group classes, men's and women's cart classes and the new rider draft horse competition.

Ray and his wife Shirley started going to the farm show nearly 25 years ago, and have missed only two years when the weather was really bad.

"Road conditions are what I worry about more than anything," he said.

The blizzard during the '96 Farm Show forced them to stay over an extra day in Harrisburg, then their truck slid into a snow bank near Ebensburg on the trip home. None of he horses were hurt.

Ray said he especially appreciates the improvements at the Farm Show's horse barn that have made the stay much more enjoyable for both the exhibitors and the animals.

The show is good advertisment for his Belgians, Ray said, and this year he'll have an eye open for potential buyers. His farm now has 19 of the big horses, and he hopes to find new homes for as many as five of them next spring.

Terry and Sandy Fairman have been traveling from their home near Creekside to the Farm Show for several years with daughters Nicole, 11, and Brittany, 9, and several head of Limousin cattle.

This year there will be some changes. The Fairman entourage will include new daughter Brooke, who will be six months old in January, and the Fairmans will be showing Hampshire pigs instead of cattle.

"It's relaxing. It's our vacation. It's a nice getaway," said Sandy of the Farm Show.

The olders girls will exhibit the pigs in the 4-H competition.

Steve Kwisnek of Scenic View Farms near Clarksburg is a 20-year veteran of the Farm Show, and typically stays four or five days each year.

He plans to make the trip in January with 10 of his Southdown sheep.

Scenic View Farms sells breeding sheep, and Kwisnek values the annual farm show from a business standpoint.

"If you do good (in the competition), you find buyers," he said.

For Clyde McConaughey of Mahoning Creek Farms near Smicksburg, the farm show is also an integral part of his year-round business. His farm raises Duroc and Hampshire hogs, and McConaughey said it's important that breeders make every effort to exhibit as many animals at the farm show as possible.

"You've got to keep the number of animals up. We try to keep them up to 30 head or more in each breed" to attract buyers from as far away as New England and Virginia.

McConaughey plans to do his part by trucking at least 16 animals to January's show.

"We started showing (at the Farm Show) in 1939," McConaughey said. "We're probably the oldest exhibitor there."

The Farm Show helps promote his farm and his business ventures during the rest of the year.

"It lets people know you're still in operation," he said.

Mary Miller, a home economics teacher in the Northern Cambria Middle School, hopes to see her daughters participate in the 4-H "Fashions with Flair" fashion show at the Farm Show.

Miller and her husband Tony are sponsors of the "Treasure Seekers" community 4-H club in the Strongstown area, and their four children — Mary, 12, Michael, 11, Tony, 8, and Amanda, 6 — will be visiting the show for the first time.

Mary won prizes in the Indiana County Fair and Green Township Community Fair for a vest, shirt, shorts, beret and decorated shoes she made. They'll be on display at the Farm Show, and Mary may be chosen to model them in the fashion show.

Daughter Amanda may have the chance to model clothes sewn by her mother.

Other members of the Treasure Seekers are sending cooking, sewing, wildlife and woodworking entires for the many 4-H competitions.

Although both sets of grandparents lived on farms, it will be the first visit to the state Farm Show for Jennifer Cribbs, Indiana County's Queen Evergreen.

A freshman marketing major at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Cribbs expects a busy two-day itinerary, including opportunities to meet Gov. Tom Ridge and Agriculture Secretary Charles Brosius, giving comments along with other commodity queens at the show's International Day dinner banquet on Friday, Jan. 10, and welcoming visitors, especially at the show's Christmas tree exhibit.

"My dad's been telling me all about it," she said. "I'm expecting it to be like the county fair — but really big."

"It's Old Home week for me. It's been one of the bright spots of my life," said Clayton Winebark of Rochester Mills of the 51 Farm Shows he has attended.

He's planning on being back for the 52nd time in January.

Winebark is a former regional director of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Region IV headquartered in Gibsonia. Over the years he's made many acquaintances and friends at the annual exposition.

"I started showing pigs (at the farm show) in 1949 as a high school freshman," he said. "I'll go as long as I'm able."

Now retires, he'll have more time to watch his four grandchildren showing pigs, and plans to spend several days at the show.

The change to a Saturday start a few years ago was an improvement, he said, making it possible for more students, teachers and working people to visit the show on the weekend.

R. Michael Mellott, left, garnered top ribbon at the Lancaster County Tobacco Show with his Pennsylvania 41 wrapper for the third year in a row. At right is Raymond Rinehart, leaf purchaser with Lancaster Leaf Company and one of the show judges. The other show judge, not pictured, was Geoffrey H. Ranck, Domestic Tobacco Company.

September the weather improved for curing.

Because of overcast, moist days in the growing season, leaves were not able to thicken and make the weight necessary for good yields.

Growers who store tobacco in the cellar have to worry about the tobacco getting wet when the weather turned warmer and foggy, as it did last week. It should be taken back up from the cellar to dry in the barn.

The past growing season, "we saw a good bit of etch virus," said Yocum, which includes white spotting on the leaves. With blue mold, growers "lucked out" this year because the weather pattern, which usually brings the spores from Kentucky, shifted to a more northerly direction. As a result, areas of the Ohio Valley were stricken with the mold, and Canada had it for the first time in a long while, said Yocum. "Kentucky and Ohio had a lot of blue mold," he said.

The key to controlling blue mold would be keeping the molds out in the early stages of tobacco growth. If it comes in early, it can do damage, said Yocum.

Yocum, who will be judging tobacco today at the Farm Show, said that when he's deciding on a champion he looks for leaves that aren't bruised or sunburned. The leaves that stand out will be those that have uniform color, good stretch, don't show insect damage or holes, are free of molds or sunburn, and have tips that aren't frayed or crispy. Judging begins at the Farm Show Complex today at 9 a.m.

year showing at the Farm Show. Although Lee spends some time at the Farm Show, both know that attending shows is something Joanne loves to do.

At The Farm Show

"Lee knows I enjoy going to the shows, although you don't get a lot of sleep!" Joanne laughed. "Michael was 9 months old last year and we were snowed in. But everyone pitched in and helped. The draft horses were used to bring hay and straw through the snow for the animals in the barns."

This year the Yoders plan to show six milk cows and two heifers. They will set up Friday night and "sleep" on cots and bales of hay.

"We never get much sleep with the cows mooing, the kids playing and the lights on all night," Joanne laughed.

Lee, Cindy (18) and Brad (17) do most of the showing. Cindy's been showing animals since 9 years old.

In 1993 during the Mifflin County Youth Fair, Cindy earned the Ora Sunderland Award for the outstanding 4-H dairy club member.

In 1995, both Cindy and Brad received the award. The Yoder family earned premier breeder and premier exhibitor awards three years in a row at the Mifflin County Youth Fair.

Joanne said she sees showing dairy animals as a way to expose others to farming, especially at the Farm Show.

"It's a way to educate the public. At Harrisburg, the non-farm kids come in and get excited about what they see. The milking area gets crowded every evening with people watching."

Teaching responsibility and working cooperatively are top priorities at Ridge-Point farm, home of Lee D. and Joanne Yoder's family and Holstein herd.

Lee D. and Joanne Yoder lead one of their show animals, Ridge-Point Mascot Mindy. Mindy's production is projected to be 26,370 pounds milk at 305 days.

At Home

Lee D. and Joanne milk 75 Holsteins three times a day on a farm they rent from Son and Betty Bonson. The Yoders believe their rolling herd average of 23,289 pounds of milk is their reward for good herd health, a good breeding program and raising good crops.

"My goal is to make better forages so we don't have to buy a lot of protein. I try to teach the boys that too," Lee said. "In 1992, we installed a liquid manure system. That really cuts down on fertilizer."

The Yoders earned the Mifflin County Conservation District cooperator of the year award in 1993 because of their good conservation practices. Lee also hauls over 200 loads of sawdust to local farmers each year in addition to the field work.

The Yoders rent three farms for a total of 180 tillable acres. They've been milking at Son Bon-

Livengood Trio Taking High Spirits, Good Animals To Farm Show

The Livengood siblings all plan to participate in state Farm Show events. Erin holds the lamb she intends to show along with a steer, and is joined by David, who is to square dance, and Angela, who also intends to show a steer and a lamb.

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BOSWELL (Somerset Co.) — Togetherness is an operative word of three high-spirited Livengood siblings who have been itching for the state Farm Show dates to arrive.

Closed winter roads last January sabotaged their plans to attend the blizzard-ridden, 1996 event.

Angela, 18, Erin, 16 and David, 13, children of David and Rose Livengood, say state shows are exciting and the competition keen.

Usually, they stay three nights and four days, participating in a variety of events.

Give her any animal and Angela is happy.

"I like to be around animals and to work with them," she said. "I'm planning to become a veterinarian."

With 10 years of experience showing, she's taking a Chi Maine Angus steer and a Suffolk lamb to the event. It will be her second experience appearing in Farm Show competition.

Hers was the Somerset County grand champion steer in 1995; the reserve champion Somerset County bred steer in 1993 and, in 1994, the reserve champion home grown lamb.

Erin met the previous owners of her registered purebred Shorthorn steer at the local jackpot show. Swinging a deal with them — a family from the state of Indiana — to purchase the fellow, seemed a smart move.

After he nailed the reserve middleweight champion title at the 1996 Keystone International Livestock Exposition (K.I.L.E.), Erin, a Farm Show first-timer, had no regrets.

With the Shorthorn, she was also named the county exhibitor at the 1996 Somerset County Beef Jackpot Show.

In 1994 she had the grand champion steer at Somerset County Fair and the county bred champion. Hers was named the reserve champion county bred steer in 1995.

Market lamb competition in 1991 found her lamb winning a reserve grand champion banner. At the Farm Show she is also showing a lamb.

David is to be gussied up and swingin' his partner in his favorite square dancing.

A 1996 junior master showman at the Somerset County Fair, he and some three busloads of square dancers from Somerset will promenade in the show arena.

"You miss a day of school," he replied, when asked why he has square danced for the last five years.

Perhaps when she hears that her pupil correctly executed every "number" called by the caller, it will make his absenteeism easier for his math teacher to accept.

The active Steaks and Chops 4-H Club members have varying affection for animals. Give David, however, sports any day of the week, not critters — except steers.

"I don't like lambs because they are too small," he remarked. "So I play sports more than take care of animals," the all-star little league

Lopy Still Looks Good Even In Work Clothes

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

WAKEFIELD (Lancaster Co.) — The supreme champion dairy cow at the 1996 Pennsylvania Farm Show still looks as good as ever in her work clothes on the farm of Robert, Joyce, and son Steve Wagner located east of town. SV Toptin Lopy VG-89 is just about dry and due in July, ready for the fall shows again. While not in the right stage of lactation to come back to the 1997 Farm Show, this tall Jersey with a lot of dairy character, a flat, wide rump and an excellent "dish-rag" dry udder, gives promise for a competitive show season at the All-American in Harrisburg, the Maryland State Fair at Timonium, or the World Dairy Expo at Madison.

"We would have liked to come back to the Farm Show with Lopy again this year," Steve said. "But it is hard to win with a dry cow. And the Farm Show is in the middle of January, so it is also hard to get cattle ready for this show. But the supreme champion class does tend to bring out good cattle even in the middle of winter."

At Bo-Joy Farm, Lopy with 2y 17,650m 870f 658p, and several other Jersey cows need to hold their own with a lot of good looking Brown Swiss and several Guernseys and Holsteins. And the supreme champion that was also reserve All American, fits right in the herd with size, even with the EX-92 My-T-Fine Pride Brown Swiss cow that has a top record of 4-9y 26,085m 997f 884p and her VG-88, EX-MS daughter Bo-Joy Emory Prim with 3y 20,546m 898f 806p.

Another Brown Swiss show winner Bo-Joy Blend Riffle was 1st place four year old at the farm show and has a record of 3y 20,782 1,043f 797p.

Steve's grandfather purchased the 200-acre farm in 1935. Until 12 years ago the Wagner family had Registered Guernseys. But they switched to the more rugged Brown Swiss, and today the herd consists of 56 Brown Swiss, 10 Holsteins, and three Jerseys.

The original seed stock for the Brown Swiss herd came from Marty Delbert's disperal at Pine Grove and now only three dairy animals on the farm are not home bred.

Steve is known for his work as a fitter for some of the top show herds in the area. And that's what he did for a living until last year when he came home to help Mom and Dad with the home herd. Sandwiched in the middle, Steve worked for Em Tran, the cattle embryo facility at Elizabethtown.

"I came back home because the genetics here are so good, it was an opportunity I couldn't miss," Steve said. "To start with, Mom liked the Brown Swiss since they are so hardy and the modern cow is quite dairy and has increased in production quite a bit. We breed for type and try to make milk from what we feed. Type is the big thing especially feet and legs to make them last. We like cows that stay in the herd a long time, so we don't push them in production as hard as some people.

"Showing doesn't make you money, but it gets your name out, and there is a great demand for show cattle especially in the Brown Swiss breed, for foreign exports. You meet these buyers at the World Dairy Expo."

The Wagners grow all their own feed and purchase only protein to top dress on the computerized feeder in the dry lot. A TMR mix distributed in the feed bunks is formulated for 70 pounds production with nutrient needs over this production calculated into the computer that measures out the individual cow's needs.

Free choice hay is given in large round bales to help develop more rib capacity. They milk in a double 4 herringbone milking parlor.

To be a good dairyman, Steve believes you need to be a well-rounded individual. "You must be versatile in everything," he said. "You need to be able to fix machinery yourself. And you need to have a lot of cow knowledge.

"Many people push for production setting world records. It is amazing what they can get out of cows. But for us, I could never go commercial. We try to set up for breeding type, doing the shows, and getting our name established for quality cattle. My goal is to have the kind of cattle that will fit the export market to make that bonus at the end of the year. You can make money from farming if you don't market offspring, but why just farm?"

The Wagners are not really into computers for their records and information from the Internet. They may get a computer in the future, but right now they do not see themselves having the time to play with it.

To select a calf for the show string, Steve looks for a quality calf that has the right type. They pull out their show calves in June and feed with the show ring in mind. They want the calves to stay clean and be trained to lead. A lot of timothy hay is fed to develop body capacity. Oats is fed to give a nice hair coat. Feet are trimmed, and the heifers are tied up but let out for exercize every day.

"Farming is getting harder and harder," Steve said. "The high milk prices this summer were a nice break, but they are not going to last. This was nice especially at the same time the grain prices skyrocketed. But now that the feed prices have settled down to a more reasonable level things will get more back to normal.

"I came back to the home farm because the time was right," Steve said. "We have an excellent genetic base for a top quality herd. And I'm looking forward to developing this herd into the future."

With Lopy, a Jersey supreme champion and reserve All American, and a barn full of Brown Swiss that have a type average of 86.1, you might be tempted to think the future is now.

SV Toptin Lopy VG-89, 1996 Pennsylvania Farm Show supreme champion and reserve All-American, with 2y 17,650m 870f 658p.

My-T-Fine Pride EX-92, with record of 4-9 26,085m 997f 884p and a daughter Bo-Joy Emory Prim VG-88, EX MS, with 3y 20,546m 898f 806p.

York 4-H Meats Judge Equally At Home In Show Arena

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

DOVER (York Co.) — Place him in the show ring and he often takes champion honors.

Put him through the auction arena, and he may set a new price record.

Send him to a national competition, and he brings home the top award.

"I like to compete, to see what I can do," grinned Mike Burrell, an affable and easy-going York 4-H member who has managed to snag top honors in just about every competition he enters.

In November, the 16-year-old Dover High School junior took first place in the national 4-H meats judging contest, held at Kansas City, Kansas. With that top placing came a $1,000 scholarship and more awards to add to a trophy and ribbon collection that nearly overflows the family's Mountain Road home.

Burrell found his interest in livestock spurred eight years ago while visiting the York Fair. He spied a classmate showing sheep and decided it looked like an interesting thing to do.

When Burrell sets his mind to do something, he works at it; and his parents, William and Carolyn Burrell, are a supportive team in all his efforts.

He settled on sheep because of their smaller size and the lesser investment needed than for a beef project. The Burrell family has a 10-acre farm on Mountain Road, north of Dover, and sheep better fit their facilities.

I like sheep more," Burrell says of this livestock choice. "Steers are so difficult to train and get ready for a show. And there's always a steer at the shows that manages to get loose. Sheep are easier to handle, but they do take as much work as a steer."

A Suffolk enthusiast, Burrell has both purebreds and some unregistered stock of the large, black-headed breed, as well as one Hampshire in his small flock. For market class competition, he has done well with Suffolk crossbreds.

"The Suffolks usually have more meat and better carcasses," said this accomplished meats and livestock judge. "They're meatier and leaner. Judges seem to like the black-faced sheep better, too."

It was his knowledge of meats, off the hoof, as well as on, that earned Burrell his national meats judging honors.

The Phil Sellers family, whose sons are long-time junior sheep exhibitors in York County, encouraged Burrell early in his 4-H career to become involved in meats judging. So, as a second-year 4-H member, long before he was old enough even to be on the team, Burrell began attending meats judging practices.

By 1992, he was old enough to enter his first 4-H meats judging competition in York County.

He won, besting much more veteran competitors.

For the last two years, he was first place meats judge at 4-H State Days at Penn State. And, in both 1995 and 1996, his meats and livestock judging skills helped him win the Stockmen's Contest at the Keystone International Livestock Exhibition at Harrisburg.

Named high individual overall at the Kansas City national contest, Burrell also won the meats identification portion and was second in reasons.

Meats identification included accurately identifying 30 cuts of meats and species of origin, the location of the cut in the carcass and the proper method of cooking each cut.

Entrants also had to place beef and pork carcass classes as well as a class each of hams, rounds, pork chops and rib steaks.

A total of 84 individuals and 21 teams took part in the national competition, with the York team placing ninth.

Other team members included Amy Dise, Seven Valleys, Drew Bankert, Winterstown and Mindy Albright, Glen Rock.

Coaches for the team are Joan Grim, Thomasville, Mike Bankert, Winterstown and Scott Shell, Dallastown.

Extension livestock and dairy agent Tim Beck also helped with some team coaching. Frequent hosts for practice sessions were Bankert's Meats, Nell's Market and Richard Beck's meat market.

A regular Pennsylvania Farm Show competitor, Burrell is now making final preparations to exhibit his remaining Suffolk market wether in the junior show. Earlier, the wether topped its lightweight division at the York Fair.

Burrell expects to compete as well in the Shepherd's Contest, which he won in 1993. Entrants in the Shepherd's Contest take a quiz on the sheep and wool industry, identify feedstuffs and equipment, judge classes of sheep and wool, and shear and fit a sheep just off the pasture in a given amount of time.

"I like the wooly ones. When you have more wool to work with, you can do more with them," said Burrell, who thrives on such challenges to his shepherding skills.

Burrell credits his shepherding abilities to 4-H leader Carolyn Kern and her daughter, Julie, who taught him how to fit sheep and shear his animals. Now he does all his own shearing, to the delight of his dad who disliked the chore.

Show preparations actually begin the year before, when Burrell breeds his ewes for lambing early in the year.

Some of the ewes may be bred to his herd sire, "Turbo," and others crossed out to other bloodlines. While Turbo himself is not a show animal, he does sire winning lambs.

It is not unusual for the earliest lamb to arrive during Farm Show week, when the family is also traveling to and from Harrisburg.

Checking the ewes close to lambing is the last thing Burrell does before going to bed at night.

"You can pretty much tell if they're close and going to lamb soon," he said of a shepherd's need to know the animals and their behaviors.

By May, when weigh-in and tagging for 4-H projects is scheduled, Burrell must select his lambs for show use. A member of the Dover FFA, he also tags a few for vo-ag projects.

Heavier lambs are earmarked for the late summer 4-H roundup, while lighter ones are tagged for the York Fair and Farm Show.

Because his flock is a relatively small one, Burrell often separates and hand feeds each animal according to its growth and body finish in relationship to upcoming shows and sales.

"Some grow fast and can get wasty if they are overfed," he explained. A fairly-high protein ration of alfalfa pellets and barley is a favored feed, but not fattening, for animals already in good condition.

To keep them lean and muscled, Burrell's lambs also have a sort of jungle-gym exercise area outside the farm's small barn.

Just as athletes train for competition, Burrell's lambs scale a ramp to go in and out of the barn, often playing head-butting games with one another over claiming the top of the ramp.

They stand up on blocks to reach their feed trough and seem to enjoy the hurdles provided for in the lot jumping for additional exercise.

Such attention to details has paid off handsomely for Burrell, both in the lineup of awards his lambs have won and the bank account he socks his winnings into toward pre-vet college studies at Penn State.

In 1995, Burrell champion junior market Suffolk wether set a new York Fair price record of $8 per pound. Purchaser Russell Horn Sr., gave the lamb back to Burrell. Named "Champ," the tame pet now just "hangs out" with the flock.

At last summer's 4-H, Burrell took reserve champion honors with another Suffolk wether.

His grandparents formed a buying "syndicate," B & N Enterprises, to purchase the pink ribbon winner at $5.45 per pound.

Burrell won the York Fair's junior market lamb show again last fall, with a Suffolk ewe. Again, a price record was set when Eric Glass's Oak Ridge Farm in Maryland was the winning bidder at $10 per pound. Glass also returned the ewe to Burrell, who plans to breed her to Turbo.

Just for diversity, Burrell began raising and showing pigs for 4-H a few years ago. While he usually gets only three, last year he went "whole hog" and acquired eight.

"That was just too many," he admitted, noting that their facilities were not large enough for eight grown pigs. "It's just fun to show pigs; lots of the same people that show sheep also show pigs."

With sheep judging the beginning of the fair, and hogs exhibited during the second half of the fair, his dad schedules vacation for the entire week to help Mike and other junior exhibitors with their show strings.

With both show and auction ring honors, plus a national meats judging title, to his name, Burrell now plans to focus on livestock judging. He has had plenty of practice in the last two years, and won the junior competition both times he has entered the Southeast Regional contest. He also won the junior division at the York County contest in 1996.

His Dover FFA advisors are encouraging Burrell to help organize an FFA meats judging team. That contest is somewhat different from the 4-H version, with no reasons given.

Instead, competitors are required to do some mixing of meat products, such as formulating hamburger blends.

Whatever he tackles, Burrell will do it with that slow, wide grin, his penchant for details and a desire to do his very best.

baseball slugger who saw state championship action at West Chester, said.

A young man of all seasons, at least in sports, there's football in the fall and basketball in the wintertime.

Angela and Erin understand animal personalities.

"Each animal has to be handled in a different way," reflected Angela, explaining their sensitive and temperamental nature. The creatures are adoptive of whatever mood they sense in the person caring for them.

Efficiency in the 24 hours God allotted to each day, especially during the school year, is Angela's priority.

She could never manage working part time for the Senft's — Terry and Susan — if she didn't wisely manage her time.

"I feed calves, clean pens and milk cows," she said, audibly accounting for the 10-hour, weekly responsibilities.

"You know you have to put back time for the animals," (feeding, grooming, exercising) said the school student council member, public speaking competitor, and now, one of four Pennsylvania 4-H'ers chosen to attend, next April, the National 4-H Conference held in Washington, D.C.

Everybody in the household has responsibilities, so while their chores aren't always enjoyable, they see no reason to waste time complaining.

In fact, their physical labors have developed healthy and fit teen-agers whose solid work ethics are what their parents, from the start, had in mind.

"I'm stronger than the guys in my class. I'm not kidding," said Erin, for whom the remarkable size of the corn growing where the manure was spread earlier, was a terrific reward for having to spread it at all.

The corn, in fact, towered well above the corn stalks of a neighboring crop where the root system obviously had not benefited from certain nutrients.

"It's all by hand," said Erin. "We shovel it on the lawn tractor wagon, drive to the field and shovel it off.

"Sometimes," interjected Rose, who works at the local Social Security Administration office, "kids who are raised on a farm don't actually do the work."

Although their 1.2-acre property doesn't qualify as a farm, some 13 ewe lambs are kept for breeding purposes. In addition, each year they raise two market lambs.

Five steers — one each for the 4-H fair projects, plus two others, find space enough on the 20 acres of leased land.

Dad David, an employee of Frank M. Sheesley, an industrial contractor, is a leader in the Steaks and Chops 4-H organization.

"They've always had competitive animals," David said, in affirmation of Rose's statement.

"They always have good animals and we want to give them opportunities to experience new things," Rose said.

And if parents want to build quality into their kids, David said he believes they should involve them in a 4-H program.

"It (4-H) has shown them responsibility," he said in observation of his own children.

"If they weren't in 4-H," said Rose, "their lives would be pretty dull."

Self-confidence is another bonus of 4-H which prompts, "It shows us leadership," from Erin.

With her sister, Erin is also a member of the Somerset Area High School student council and the Somerset County 4-H Council.

Their participation in the 4-H exchange program, when Angela went to Idaho, and Erin, this year went to Michigan, were the educational, cultural-broadening, inner-resource building and fun experiences they were meant to be.

Friendship and enjoying each other's company is why these three all have joined the courtesy team of 13- to 18-year-olds, which does weekend baby-sitting at the Hidden Valley Resort.

What do they get out of it? Well, naturally ski passes to hit the snowy slopes.

Maryland Announces Mid-Winter Farm Meeting

WESTMINSTER, Md. — The 1997 University of Maryland Extension mid-winter farm meeting has been set for one day this year, Jan. 22 at the Agriculture Center in Westminster, according to a recent news release.

Attendance at the meeting fulfills the Maryland Department of Agriculture private pesticide applicator recertification requirements, for those whose license expires Dec. 31.

Registration is necessary, in order to ensure a proper headcount for lunch. Call (410) 848-4611 immediately.

The program starts at 8 a.m. with morning refreshments and the opening of trade show vendor and allied business booths. The refreshments are sponsored by Central Maryland Farm Credit.

Instructional sessions are set to begin promptly at 9:15 a.m. and will be completed by 3:30 p.m.

Nine topics are to be covered. Included sessions will cover management practices that build soil structure; a pesticide recertification update; how to reduce off-site movement of pesticides; the efficacy of ACA/ASSET and nitrogen stabilizers; new information on weed control; monitoring and improving crop yields; how China and other Asian nations affect Carroll County corn prices; a new soil test rating system; and how to get more from hay sales.

"Prowl lets me worry about things other than spraying my corn again in the summer; it works great all season."

SRBC Meeting

decade because of a series ot droughts that caused water shortages.

However, it also has received more attention because of water demand problems that have caused some shortages even during non-drought years.

In recent years, the SRBC has revised regulations from piecemeal rules developed over time into a comprehensive and coherent package. It also has been conducting research on groundwater and the flow of nutrients, as well as the use of artificial "wetlands" (biofilters) in reducing nutrient flows from croplands.

In its most publicly visible role, the SRBC has been functioning as an agency that facilitates the storage of water in upper basin reserviors for release during drought.

To maintain critical flows in the river during drought, the agency charges for the "consumptive use" of water — that water use that evaporates or transpires water out of the immediate water system, so as to deplete the flows to the river.

The money is used to pay for the storage of water in reserviors that is then released during drought, to compensate for the consumptive uses.

It is estimated that, during a drought of historical significance, more than 40 percent of the river's flow is used consumptively. That amount is expected to increase if residential and commercial uses continue to increase at current rates.

The Eastern United States historically has not had the water problems experienced in the West, but demands on the flow of water within the basin have increased dramatically over the years.

Per capita use of water has increased dramatically, while an overall population increase has been increasing the demand and use of water.

Many water-use regulatory issues remain unresolved, largely because the people living in the basin have never had to come to terms with those issues.

For example, since state policy changed and now dissuades communities from establishing or maintaining existing surface water reservoirs for community drinking water supplies, unless costly treatment systems (including staff) are incorporated, many small communities are seeking combined efforts for public water supplies. Many of those supplies are coming from wells.

In the meantime, water supplies to many communities are provided through private water companies that have grown through buyouts and consolidations.

Out-of-area water supplies are becoming more common, especially in areas with large residential developments and a lack of adequate supplies from natural, close-proximity watersheds.

In some cases, groundwater-dependent residential developments have dried-up streams. (All streams are actually flows of groundwater forced to the surface. True surface water flows generally only occur during a rain storm.)

In other cases, there are some areas where water supplies were inexpensive, and sewage was primarily treated on-lot. For years those residents had inexpensive water and sewer service.

However, with residential and industrial demands exceeding local water capacity, outside sources had to be created in order to get residential development approved. (While environmental laws don't prevent building homes in water-depleted areas, financial support is difficult to obtain for a project that doesn't secure potable water.)

Some of the problems this scenario presents are not necessarily felt by those in the new residential developments, but rather with the historic communities where water and sewer costs had been minimal.

Such subcommunities can and do include a high percentage of retired or fixed-income, long-time residents who now, in effect, have been forced to give up inexpensive water and sewer service to subsidize expensive systems that were built to facilitate approval for new residential development.

Approval for such expensive systems has been promoted by local policitians under the ruse that increasing residential growth provides a stronger tax base and thus a better standard of living and long-term lower taxes.

Scientific research been shown the reserve to be the case, however, as residential developments, especially newer ones, carry higher demands for public services and actually use more in local government funds than are paid through taxes and fees.

While the SRBC is not directly involved in forming state policy with water and sewer and its subsequent affect on development, or with local policies that benefit residential developments instead of providing for long-term stability of water supplies, the SRBC has to deal with the reality that residential development is not dependent upon the availability or adequacy of water supplies.

In some areas, demand on groundwater sources has caused extreme problems.

The SRBC, as a regional authority, has the power to prevent groundwater withdrawals that overdraw upon an aquifer, however it has yet to exercise that option, though it has been considered in some areas with heavy development tapping into high value aquifers, such as in some areas near State College.

Further complicating are the realities that have yet to be addressed legislatively, such as the occurance of sinkholes which can be directly linked to the stability of groundwater flows.

Again, while the SRBC has the authority to deny groundwater withdrawals because of natural limitations, much remains to be documented concerning the availability of groundwater and the specifics of certain aquifers.

Without supporting documentation, legal challenges to denials of groundwater are difficult to battle.

Further, since the agency is generally not well-understood by the general public, it can lack the necessary political support that some circumstances to exercise its authority.

The agency, and its sister agency — the Delaware River Basin Commission — both depend upon state and federal support. Recently the U.S. Congress sought to eliminate funding for both.

Hershey Named To Advisory Board

RALEIGH, N.C. — Lancaster County dairy producer Steve Hershey of Penryn has been elected to the first advisory board of the newly merged dairy herd improvement data processing records centers of DPRC Raleigh and Mid-State DRPC.

According to a news release made this week, Hershey was elected to the advisory board position during the first annual meeting of the merged DRPCs in Charleston, South Carolina, in November.

The advisory board consists of six dairy producers and three dairy herd improvement association or extension staff members within the DRPC-service area, which includes 19 member-DHIAs with herds in 32 states.

The board reviews the center's programs, operating procedures and costs and makes recommendations to member-affiliate representatives.

Hershey is an advocate of DHI records and contributes much of his time to the DHI program. He was elected to the Lancaster DHIA board in 1993 and has served as its vice president for the past three years.

He also served as chairman of its Lab Committee in 1994, when the board was researching the feasibility of owning its own laboratory.

Currently, Hershey serves as the chairman for the Lancaster DHIA Field Committee which is responsible for technician service to the member dairymen.

The Hershey farm has been in the family since 1875 — five generations. It is located near the village of Penryn in northern Lancaster County. The farm is owned and operated

Amish Butter Sculpture

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Ag Secretary Charles Brosius poses with the seventh annual butter sculpture at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

The 1997 butter sculpture is a tribute to the contributions the Pennsylvania Amish community has made to agriculture. While most tourists associate Amish farming only with Lancaster County, the Amish have created a farming legacy throughout the commonwealth.

"Since 1737 when Amish emigration to Pennsylvania started," said Karl Kroeck, PDPP chairman, "Pennsylvania has been the homestead for Amish agriculture. As we choose a theme each year for the butter sculpture, we look for a significant accomplishment in Pennsylvania tradition and history. The Amish are certainly part of the rich agricultural heritage in the state."

Harrisburg area sculptor Ed Shank returns for a second year to create the sculpture. The Holly Milk Plant, Carlisle, donated the 800 pounds of butter used for the sculpture.

The Pa. Farm Show butter sculpture is sponsored by the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East, the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program Board and the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association.

This year's butter sculpture is located in the Food Court and according to Kroech, the sponsoring organizations and the Department of Agriculture feel that more visitors are able to enjoy the sculpture by moving the display case to the popular Food Court area.

The large picture mural of a Lancaster County Amish farm scene complete with a horse and buggy was taken by Everett Newswanger, managing editor of Lancaster Farming.

by a partnership of Steve and brothers Dale and Clair. It has been featured in Lancaster Farming several times because of innovations.

Together they milk 200 cows and raise corn, alfalfa, barley and soybeans on 400 acres. Steve is in charge of herd management, which includes breeding, veterinary and management decisions.

PCDART, the dairy management software program from Raleigh's processing center, has used by the Hersheys since 1992. In fact, Lancaster DHIA staff regarded Steve as their resident farm expert on PCDART. He often consults with other producers on how to best use the program's features to meet management needs.

Outside of DHIA and farming, Hershey enjoys coaching softball and speaking to groups about Biblical studies and early church history. He spent three years teaching a middle school Bible course at a local Christian school while continuing to farm.

Hershey and wife Brenda have five children — Laura, Andrea, Kate, Kurt and Tristan.

Along with Steve, others elected to the advisory board include John Finke of Indiana, Alton Ling of Missouri, Kim Harvey of Vermont, Eubert Correll of North Carolina, and Brown Dean of Georgia.

DHIA and extension staff named to the board include Dave Sukup, manager of Heart of America DHIA; Bob Damm, manager of Dairy Lab Services; and Monty Montgomery with University of Tennessee extension.

What's New In The 1997 Farm Show

clothing-making, the mid-winter convention of the Pennsylvania FFA, and the music of an auctioneer's contest.

There is also, for the first time in more than 20 years, a demonstration by the newly reactivated Pennsylvania State Police Equestrian Drill Team.

According to Dennis Grumbine, director of the Farm Show Bureau, "We did a lot of refurbishing, painting, and lighting. I think the place looks better on the inside than it ever did.

"We have new cattle tie-outs (for livestock exhibitors) and new landscaping outside. We had a roof problem last year due to the snow storm and through the balance of spring and summer we spent $650,000 on the roof for repairs.

"So, I think we have the complex in good shape. All of our commercial (exhibitor) spots have been filled, and we have a waiting list," Grumbine said.

"We're looking for a great show from the weather man. They're calling for some of the white stuff maybe this weekend, but the long range looks pretty decent for us."

Grumbine said Wednesday he was excited about some of the entertainment returns to the state Farm Show, such as the Pennsylvania State Police Equestrian Drill Team.

For the first time in more than 20 years the Pennsylvania State Police Equestrian Drill Team has been reactivated, in part because of efforts by PSP Commissioner Paul Evanko, who is a horse enthusiast.

The team had been a regular part of opening ceremonies from its start in 1940 up until the PSP rodeo was disbanded in 1976. At that time, the equestrian team was also dropped.

In conjunction with opening ceremonies, actually just preceding the opening address by Gov. Tom Ridge, the 16-unit team is to give its initial performance since being reactivated.

In fact, Commissioner Evanko is to actually lead the team through its performance of various precision maneuvers that had been a Farm Show.

The PSP has 22 horses which are housed at its academy at Hershey. The mounts are used chiefly for police searches, crowd control, security, and patrol of remote areas.

They are also used to train cadets for parades, demonstrations, and other public activities.

According to Grumbine, "(The PSP drill team) used to be the highlight of the opening ceremonies years ago. People who have been coming to the Farm Show a long time will remember that Monday night's entertainment was that state police drill team."

Grumbine also noted the return to the Farm Show of the Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association auctioneer's calling contest.

The association holds its annual convention in Harrisburg at the same time as the Farm Show, and had held the contest last at the Farm Show Complex in the Small Arena in 1988, to best knowledge.

1997 Farm Show

This year, the event is to be held at 6 p.m. Wednesday in the upper level of the Northeast Building, near the Family Living Corner. Those who attend should feel free to bid on some of the items being auctioned, but also be prepared to listen for the unique rhythms and cadences that distinguish auctioneers from each other.

Collector farm toys and other items are to be sold during the contest with a portion of proceeds to go toward the Farm Show Scholarship Foundation.

Also, for the first time this year, there is to be a competition of wines made with Pennsylvania fruit by licensed Pennsylvania wineries. The wines have to be currently available for sale. The contest winners are to be showcased in the Family Living Corner.

Also for the first time, visitors are to select their choices for the grand champion and reserve grand champion Christmas trees in a competition sponsored by the Pennsylvania Christmas Tree Growers Association. The trees are to be on display all week in the Main Lobby of the Complex.

"Coming off last year (with the blizzard closing down the state during the Farm Show), I think I and the entire agricultural community and the hundreds of thousands of guests hope we have good weather and that we do what we do here — showcase the state's agricultural industry.

"(The Farm Show) is without a doubt, the greatest marketing tool we have to expose the state's agricultural diversity to the entire state and the entire Northeast."

On top of that marketing, last year the first International Day was held in conjunction with the Farm Show week. While the state spent $20,000 and private industry spent $48,000 to conduct that event, it resulted in more than $15 million in contract sales.

This year, another International Day event is being held Friday, Jan.10 at the Hershey Convention Center in Hershey and more than 130 international guests representing 36 countries are expected.

Some of the nations sending impressive delegations include 37 guests from Mexico, a dozen each from Russia, China, and Cambodia and seven from Sierra Leone, West Africa.

The Farm Show banquet and International Day banquet were combined representing efforts by state Agriculture Secretary Charles Brosius to support the marketing of Pennsylvania's commodities and agricultural industry, and that of Gov. Ridge's efforts to increase international exports from Pennsylvania.

All companies invited to attend the trade convention had to meet two requirements: they be a Pennsylvania company; and they had to make a product that is available for purchase on the international market.

Public parking at the Farm Show's 60-acre site is $5 per vehicle, to help cover the costs of lot maintenance and security.

Yoder Family Works Together

son's farm for 15 years and raise heifers nearby on another farm.

They milk three times a day. Lee and Brian (20) milk the early 5 a.m. shift. Cindy, Brian and Josh Rhodes, Cindy's fiance, milk at 1 p.m., and Cindy, Bradley and Josh milk again at 9 p.m.

Joanne said milking three times a day has reduced the herd's mastitis and has been good for the health of the cows overall.

Joanne spends afternoons and evenings at the barn managing the herd's breeding program.

"I breed for bigger, stronger dairy cows — for more type. I like the direction the herd is going. Our milk production went up 4,000 pounds last year. We attribute it to better quality forages, some use of BST and simply getting to know the cows better.

"Lee and I milked 15 cows our first year. Now that the children are older, I have more time to concentrate on the herd's breeding program and the paperwork."

For herd health, the Yoders' veterinarian visits every other week. Over half the herd is registered. The herd is fed TMR free choice. Their stanchion barn has 33 tie stalls and the high producers stay in the barn. The boys helped Lee build the farm's freestall barn from scratch a couple of years ago. The 26 x 48-foot building has 12 stalls on a side.

"Our children learn by working with others," Joanne explained. "They see us pitching in extra when someone's away, like me at shows or Lee hunting. Because we want them to learn the value of taking care of animals, each one is taught to milk cows and spends time feeding to see if they like it."

But with 11 children, do they ever get to "scrappin' around?"

"Sometimes," said Joanne. "That's when we give them a job and tell them to work together, and things will go better."

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — PCDART, the dairy management sofware rental program available through DRPC Raleigh, will be the topic of three workshops sponsored by Lancaster DHIA.

All workshops will be held at the Lancaster DHIA office at 1592 Old Line Road in Manheim.

PCDART is available to all dairymen served by DRPC Raleigh at a monthly rental fee of $5 per herd plus 10 cents per cow with a $20 maximum charge. PCDART allows the user to store test-day data, and daily status information for cows and heifers, including health records.

A 12:45 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 21 workshop, is designed as an informational meeting for dairymen not currently using PCDART. There will be a general overview of the program. Membership in Lancaster DHIA is not required to attend this meeting.

The topics to be discussed include: "Why a Computer," "Basic Setup," Inputting and Using Data Efficiently," plus a hands-on demonstration.

On Tuesday, Jan. 28, at 10 a.m., a workshop is to be held for the new PCDART user who would like some additional training. Topics to be discussed will be maile to the dairymen currently using PCDART.

Jersey Heifer With Horse Farm Mother Wins Big At Shows

Ben Cloninger won first in the Junior Show at Louisville with his Jersey named Voila Creme Imperial de Gwen.

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

CENTER HALL (Centre Co.) — The best of the best line up each year in Louisville during the All American Junior Jersey Show and the North American International Livestock Exposition. We imagine the winning animals to be pampered, professionally shown, and from the top herds in North America, animals whose hoofs rarely touch anything less dignifying than 12-inches of sawdust.

But when the judge announced the first-place summer yearling Jersey in the Junior Show this past year, an 11-year-old by with his gentle pet accepted the rosette. The story of Ben Cloninger and Voila Creme Imperial de Gwen begins in Centre County and is a rags-to-riches story as far as the Jersey goes ... because Voila's mother was a cull cow!

Four Springs General Serena Gwen left a Centre Hall Jersey herd to live a life of ease at Equipoise Breeding in Boalsburg, a horse breeding farm with Hanoverian stallions. Jan O'Connor purchased Gwen as a cow at the end of her first lacatation, has bred her four times and milks her by hand.

"Gwen's first calf, Creme de la Creme de Gwen, went to Tom Mason in Chestertown, Maryland. That calf won three county fairs in Maryland and later scored 88% on her udder and gave over 100 pounds of milk after calving," O'Connor says of Gwen's award winning offspring. "Her next calf, a bull called Scooby deux, is now a steer who wanders around our farm! Tom suggested we breed Gwen to Meadowland Imperial. I owe him a big thank you for that. After that, we did well. Gwen's next three calves belong to Ben Cloninger."

Ben Clonginer lives just outside Centre Hall with his father, Centre Herd Health Services veterinarian and owner Bob Cloninger, mother Ellen, sisters Emily, Elizabeth and Rebecca, and an assortment of 4-H animals out at the barn. Ben wanted to continue his 4-H showing career with Jersey's because of their smaller size. His Holstein yearling was too tall for him.

Overflow parking is available just to the north, adjacent to the Farm Show lot, at the Harrisburg Area Community College (HACC). For a .75-cent, one-way fee, there is regular shuttle bus service from the HACC parking lot to and from the Farm Show Complex Main Entrance to the Large Arena.

The walking distance, otherwise, is several hundred yards.

Admission is free to all events during Farm Show week, with public hours from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., Jan. 11 through Wednesday, Jan. 15. The show closes at 4 p.m. on Thursday.

Message boards and signs were to have been erected along I81 and elsewhere to help alleviate traffic congestion, which had been worse in previous years, before a traffic light was installed at the Farm Show parking lot entrance on Cameron Street.

Parking for those requiring spaces reserved for handicapped people can be found along the sidewalk in front of the East and West lobbies, on the Maclay Street side of the Complex. Commercial vehicles sometime use them for loading zones, though police normally keep them clear from unauthorized use.

Other handicapped parking is near the entrance to the parking lot, along the Cameron Street side of the Large Arena, and yet another area is near the North Entrance, near the outside exhibit area, where many commerical and show exhibitors park.

Restrooms are also located at various places in the Farm Show Complex. Most of the public-use facilities are located along the corridor adjacent to the Small Arena, and along the upper and lower concourses of the Large Arena.

The 81st Farm Show is, in essence, the state's top rural fair.

According to Farm Show Office-provided statistics, the total livestock entries for this year total 4,714 animals representing horses, swine, sheep, beef, dairy cattle, dairy goats and poultry and rabbits.

Of the total, 3,545 of animals are entered in the open-division (adult and youth) livestock showing. Another 1,169 were entered for youth division competitions.

Of the 498 total beef cattle entered in the Farm Show, there were 271 beef cattle in the open division, consisting of 68 Angus, eight Charolais, 55 Limousin, 67 Polled Hereford, and 73 Simmental entered.

In the youth division of beef breeding cattle, there were 41 Angus, three Charolais, 12 Limousin, 17 Polled Hereford, and 16 Simmental for a total of 89 junior animals.

There were also 65 junior market steers entered.

There were 484 dairy cattle entered with 298 to compete in the open divisions, and 186 entered by state youth.

Of those, in the open division, there are to be a total of 298 with 61 Ayrshire exhibited, 34 Brown Swiss, 17 Guernsey, 107 Holstein, 72 Jersey, and seven Milking Shorthorn cattle.

In the junior division 186 dairy cattle have been entered with 35 Ayrshire, 24 Brown Swiss, 21 Guernsey, 58 Holstein, 39 Jersey, and nine Milking Shorthorn cattle.

Jersey Heifer

In July of 1996, Voila won Junior Champion at the Lycoming County Open Jersey Show in Hughesville. The end of July, she placed 6th in her class at the District II Open Jersey Show in Shippensburg.

"She was too fat for the judge!" Ben laughs. "We put her on a diet."

At the Grange Fair in Centre Hall the end of August, Voila earned Reserve Junior Champion in the youth show and Junior Champion in the open show. Back at Hughesville in September, Voila won Junior Champion at the District 4-H and FFA Show.

Still dieting, Ben showed Voila at the Pennsylvania Junior Dairy Show in Harrisburg, placing first in the Junior Show. While there, his Jersey took 6th place in the Eastern National Jersey Show.

Animals earning first through third placings at the Pennsylvania Junior Dairy Show in Harrisburg are invited to represent Pennsylvania in Louisville as part of the state herd. Ben and his family have the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club to thank for their trip to Louisville for the All American Show.

"If it weren't for them, a lot of kids couldn't go," remarks Ben's father. "They transport the animals and pay for the feed."

At Louisville, Ben's Jersey earned first place in the Junior Show, fourth place in the All American Jersey Show and a moment in the spotlight during the parade of Junior Show winners at the Jersey Jug Futurity.

"She was one of the better ones. She was the biggest in her class — the largest framed," Ben adds. "He said she didn't blend in at the shoulders enough."

But that won't stop Ben from taking Voila to the Farm Show this month. He's proud of Voila Creme Imperial de Gwen's ties to a cull cow named Gwen. Voila's oldest sister, Creme Parfait Imperial de Gwen is housed nearby as a milk cow at J. Craig and Susan Wicker's farm. And Voila's younger sister, Creme de la Femme de Gwen, will soon be weaned from Gwen at the O'Connor's.

And what will Voila's calf be named when that time comes?

"Something normal!" laughs the whole Cloninger family.

Maria and Inez care a lot for the lambs. "They're a lot of fun," said Maria. "They're really cute when they're little."

One of the most stressful times for the Stoltzfus family is the lambing season. "We get up at least once each night to check them," starting from the end of January to mid-February, noted Kendra.

For Kendra, lambing season was also busy, considering she was involved in other school activities — including basketball.

Inez remembers checking the ewes for lambing in some of the most ferocious weather. "Especially when it's freezing," she said. "When it's like a blizzard outside, and two o'clock in the morning, and your alarm clock goes off and you're thinking, no, I can't get up that early."

A few years ago, Maria remembers one night when it was really snowing, "And I remember going to the barn. I had to get out there every two hours and make sure (the ewe) had enough to drink. (There was) two feet of snow at least in the drifts, and it was really, really windy, a blizzard. I had to go out there every couple of hours to check on the ewe."

"Lambing is the best and the worst part," said Inez. "It's awesome to go out there in the middle of the night and hear this little 'bahhh' that wasn't there before."

"It's a stressful time and a hard time but it's a very rewarding time," Maria said.

"Sometimes I've had to bring them inside, and that's been the most rewarding," Maria said. Several years ago, Maria remembered bringing in a newborn lamb and sitting by the fireplace and holding it, trying to get it to warm up. She said the family was away when it was born, and the ewe didn't lick the lamb off right away and the lamb got cold.

"I didn't think the lamb was going to make it. We put it in a bathtub of hot water and it ended up being in the house for about a week and a half. And that was a lot of fun. I would start talking and it started 'bahhing' and it would know my voice. I became it's mother, practically, when I took it out of the barn.

"It was really tame. It was my little lamb, and I became its mother. That's what I enjoy."

205 Leaders With Vision To Receive Keystone Honor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In celebrating the National FFA theme, "Leaders With A Vision," 205 state FFA members will gather for the 68th Mid-Winter Convention on Monday, Jan. 13 at 4 p.m. in the large arena of the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex.

At the Farm Show, ceremonies at 4 p.m. are set to present the Keystone Degree upon 205 members who have met the criteria and have submitted an application outlining their progress as FFA members.

The Keystone is the highest FFA degree that the state can bestow upon its members. From here, approximately 10 percent of the Keystone Degree recipients will apply for and receive their American FFA degree.

Of the 205 Keystone Degree recipients, four will be named to the position of state star in their respective agricultural area. Their applications not only outline their enrollment in agricultural education classes and FFA leadsership activities, but selection of the state stars is contingent on their supervised agricultural experience (SAE) program.

Their programs must show comprehensive planning, continuation, growth, and increase in scope with records to substantiate such accomplishments.

The four area stars include production agriculture; ag sales, service, and mechanics; horticulture; and specialized agriculture, including forestry, natural resources, and nontraditional agriculture.

The convention will also feature a keynote speaker and additional awards to parents of FFA members and supporters.

All FFA family members and friends are invited to the convention to see the state's finest.

FFA makes a positive difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for premier leadership, personal growth, and career success through agricultural education. This is in line with the 1997 FFA theme, "Leaders With A Vision."

That vision is evident in the many successful activities and projects the FFA members have been involved with through the years. Lancaster Farming salutes the recipients of this year's Keystone Degree, profiled here in this Farm Show issue. We hope their success in high school carries through to their chosen paths in life.

Lucas Allen

"Landscaping" at a technical college figures in the plans for four-year Central Columbia FFA member Lucas Allen.

Lucas, 17, son of Roger and Martha Allen, Lightstreet, Columbia County, said he enjoys the educational trips and hands-on exposure to all of agriculture.

Lucas, who served as his chapter's sentinel and treasurer, has also served on various committees, inlcuding fair, leadership, banquet, recruitment, and citrus. He has won awards in citrus sales and with the National Courtesy Corps. He has earned his Greenhand and Chapter degrees.

Chris Althoff

Chris Althoff, four-year Solanco FFA member, said he enjoys the activities the FFA has "because they are fun and everyone gets along."

Chris, 18, son of Roland and Deb Althoff, Quarryville, plans to go to trade school and become an electrician.

Chris has served on the following committees: community service, SAE, Greenhand initiation, and student leadership. He has conducted various on-farm work experience projects and won several awards, including fruist sales for the state, the chapter, and a proficiency award for ag production. Chris has earned his Greenhand, Red Rose, and chapter degrees.

Jenny S. Althouse

"I have made so many new friends through public speaking and other activities," said Jenny S. Althouse, four-year Conrad Weiser FFA member from Wernersville. "My fellow officers are all people I can count on, because they are all reliable and dedicated."

Jenny, 17, daughter of John and Betsy Althouse, Wernersville, plans to attend Penn State to major in animal science. The FFA'er said she plans to become a small animal veterinarian.

Jenny has served as chapter chaplain and vice president and now serves as president. She has been a member of the FFA contest and alumni relations committee. She has received gold medals in the state creed speaking contest and in the senior prepared speaking and extemporaneous speaking contests. Jenny received her chapter and Greenhand degrees.

Wendy Jo Atkins

"FFA teaches us so many life skills in the hands-on experiences the FFA has to offer," said four-year Cedar Crest FFA member Wendy Jo Atkins. "It taught me to do electrical work, plumbing, and has also taught me to better manage an agrilcutural-oriented profession."

Wendy, 18, daughter of William and Judy Atkins, Lebanon, plans to attend college to study to be a veterinarian or veterinary technician. Wendy, who has served as chapter sentinal, has also served on the following commitees: earnings and savings, cooperation, leadership, local, state, and national activities, alumni relations, and scrapbook.

Wendy has received the FFA prize ani-

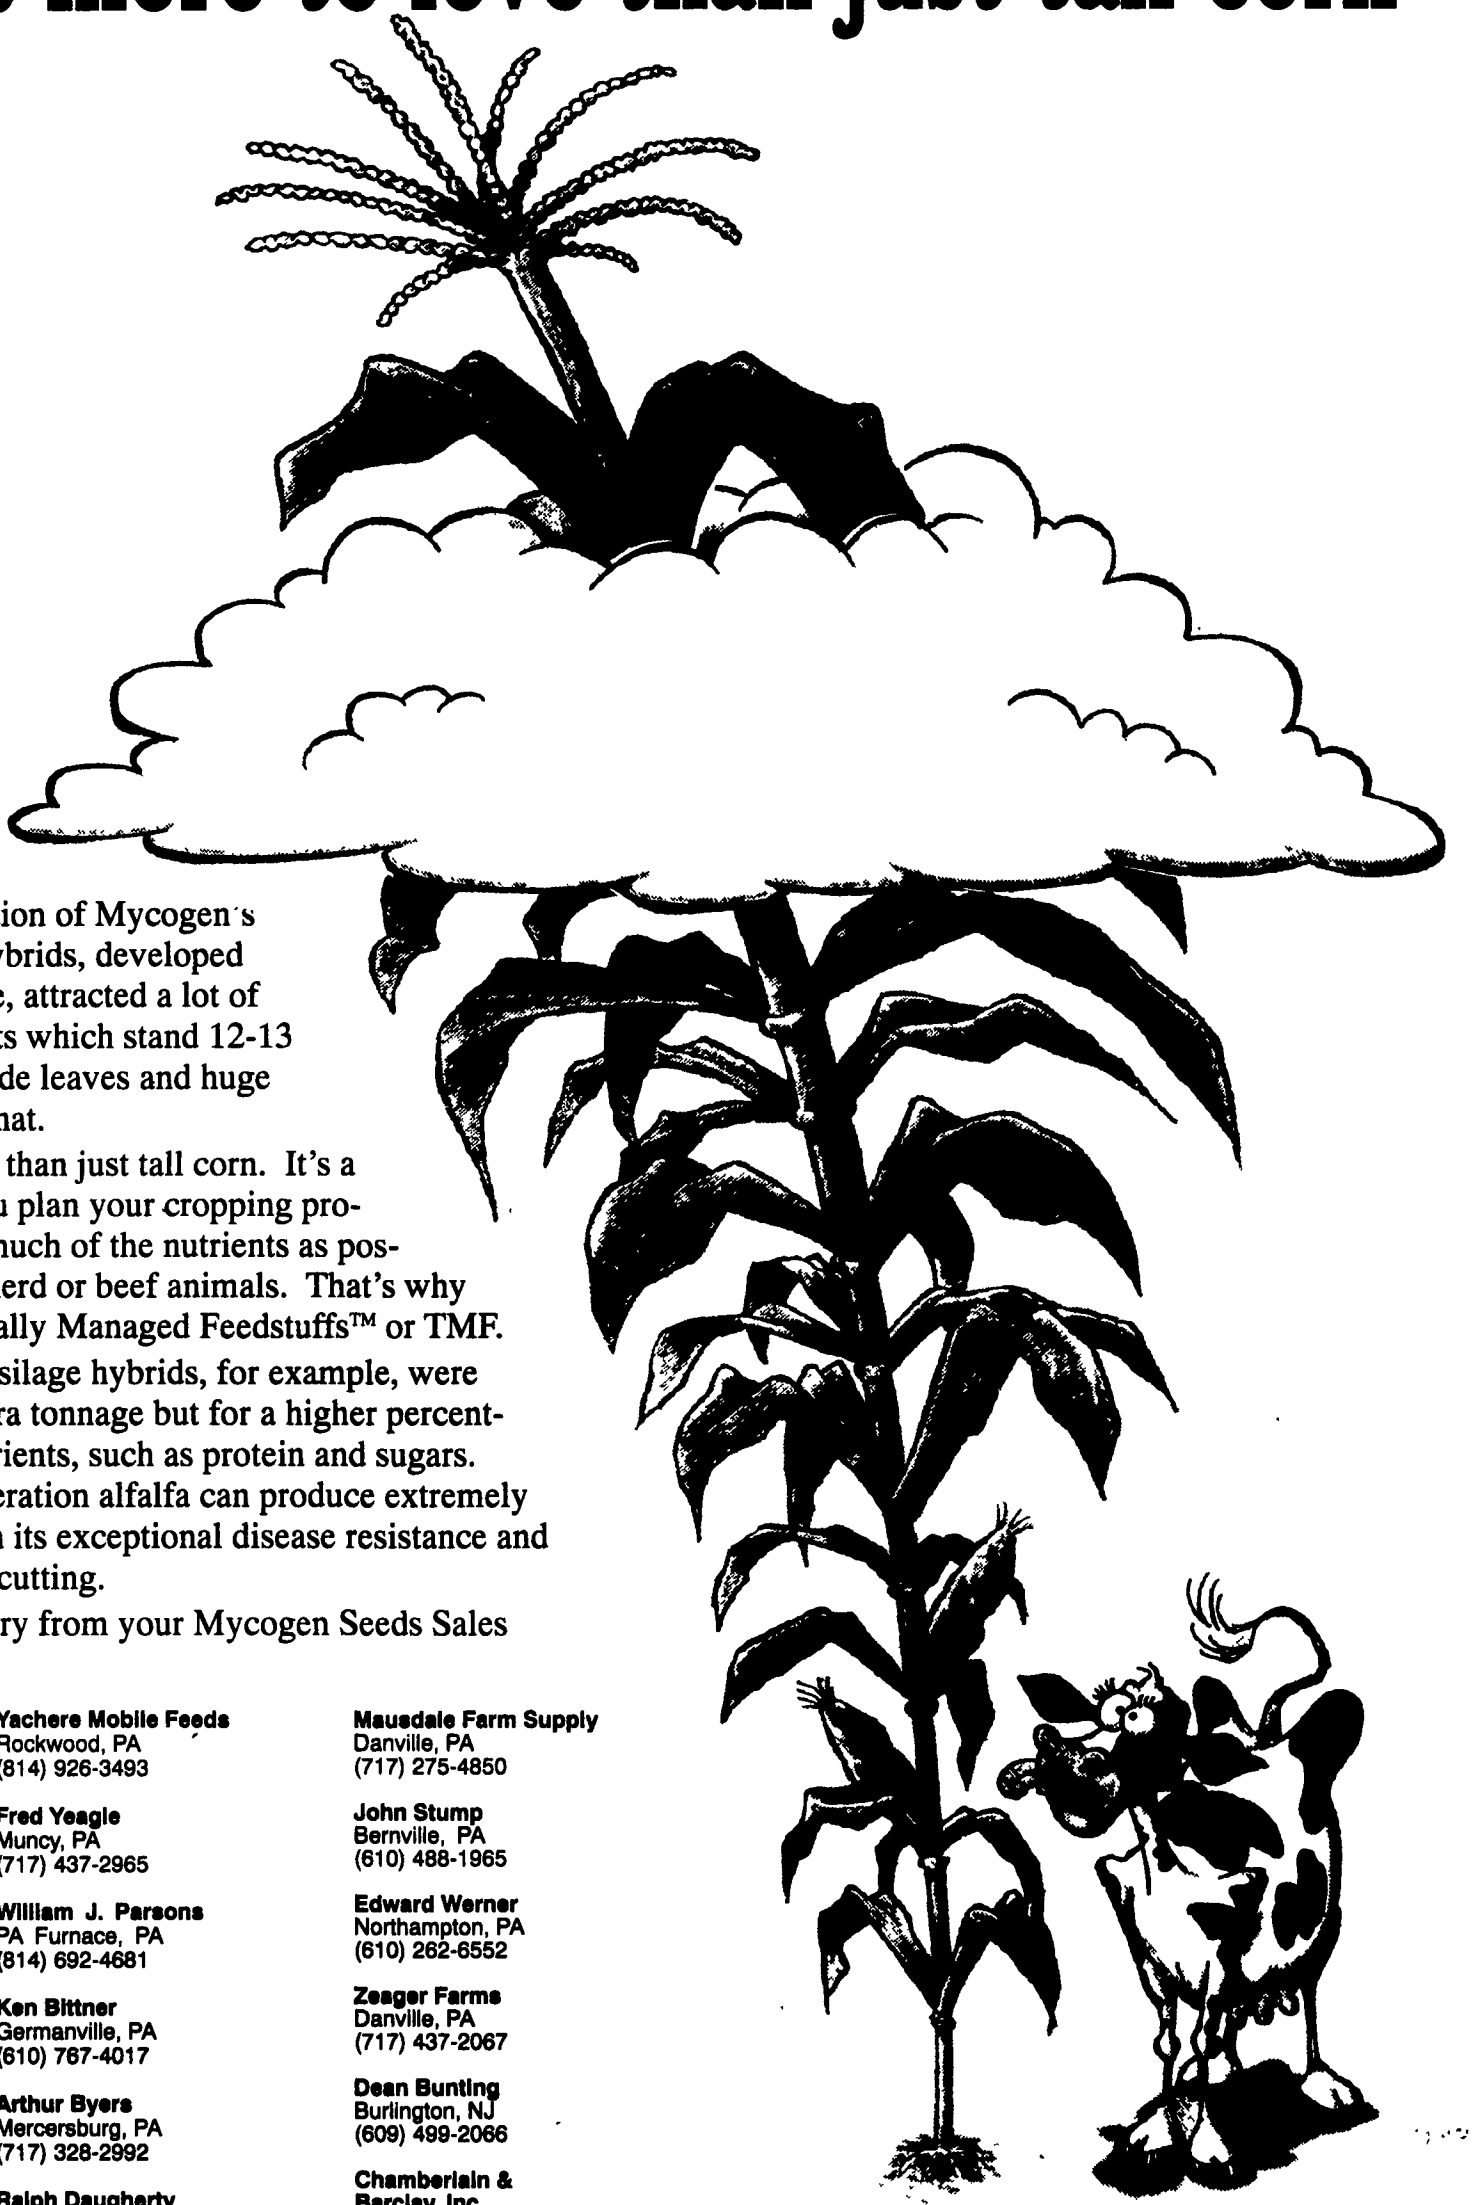
With TMF from Mycogen Seeds, there's more to love than just tall corn



The 1994 introduction of Mycogen's first TMF corn hybrids, developed exclusively for silage, attracted a lot of attention. Corn plants which stand 12-13 feet tall with very wide leaves and huge ears will tend to do that.

But TMF is more than just tall corn. It's a system that helps you plan your cropping program to produce as much of the nutrients as possible for your dairy herd or beef animals. That's why Mycogen calls it Totally Managed Feedstuffs™ or TMF.

Mycogen's TMF silage hybrids, for example, were bred not only for extra tonnage but for a higher percentage of digestible nutrients, such as protein and sugars. Likewise, TMF Generation alfalfa can produce extremely high RFVs even with its exceptional disease resistance and quick recovery after cutting.

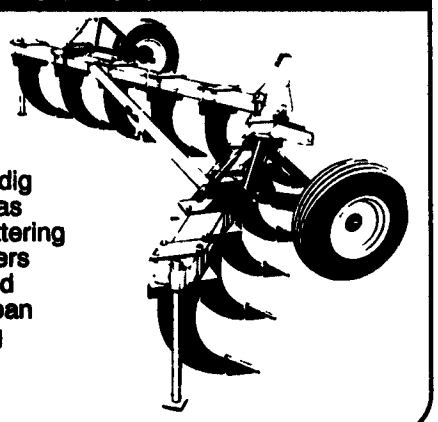
The "Quality Crafted" Line Better Seedbeds... Better Stands!

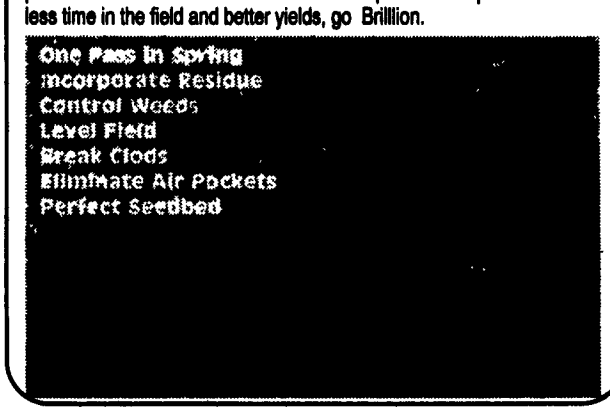
SUB SOILERS
3-5-7 Shanks



The husky, curved shanks of the Sub-Soiler dig down as deep as 16 inches, shattering compacted layers of plow sole and lifting the hardpan while it is being broken.

BRILLION COMMANDER SYSTEM

Versatile tillage tools such as Brillion's Soil Commander allows the use of Chisel Shanks or Deep-ripper Shanks to break up soil compaction. Front disk gangs and optional rear leveling disks cut residue, breaks clods, level the field and prepare the field to absorb moisture from melting snow and to reduce soil erosion. Brillion's Field Commander combined with a Brillion Pulverizer excels at creating the perfect seedbed for spring planting. C-Shanks or S-Tine Shanks leave a uniform mixture of soil and surface residue for the most effecient chemical incorporation. The X-Fold Pulverizer (shown below) breaks up clods, firms the soil without compacting, eliminates air pockets in the soil and levels the soil for optimal seed placement. For less time in the field and better yields, go Brillion.



COMPACTION COMMANDERS
NO-TILL RIPPER DEEP RIPPER - 3-5-7 Shanks

Brillion introduces their new Compaction Commander... designed to break up hard-pan and compaction as deep as 20". The standard V-shaped alloy point and wear strip leaves residue on the surface with minimal soil disturbance. Auto-rest shanks with 20" of trip height allows for non-stop tillage. Parabolic shanks lift and fracture the soil. 39" of underframe clearance assures trouble free operation even in heavy residue.

SOIL BUILDERS
5-7-9-11-13 Shanks

SOIL BUILDERS. Optional - Coulter gang can be hydraulically controlled to save maintenance dollars. Available in 2 & 3 bar.

SOIL COMMANDERS
4-5-7-9 Shanks

The Brillion Soil Commanders take Residue Management to the next generation of soil conservation efficiency.

The Soil Commanders are versatile tillage tools designed to meet the needs of the mid-size farmer who uses a 150-200 H.P. tractor. One of the keys to the machine's versatility is that it uses interchangeable shank legs and individually mounted disk assemblies instead of a disk gang. This makes possible a machine with disk assemblies on the front and rear of the frame with chisel plow or deep-ripper shanks on 15", 24", 27" or 30" spacings.

LANDCOMMANDERS
3-5-7-9-11-13 Shanks

The front disc gang has 22" x 1/4" disc blades on 15" spacings. They are designed to cut residue and work the ground to a depth of 6". The Landcommander has the ability to till from 8" to 20" deep. The rear disc gang has 20" x 7 ga. disc blades on 7.5 spacing. The 6"x4" mainframe is designed to handle the stress from the deep till shanks and disc gangs.

ARE CHICKENS BABY DINOSAURS? Part 2

R. Leach
Dept. of Poultry Science

Several years ago I wrote the original "Are Chickens Baby Dinosaurs?" in response to a column by Dave Barry.

In this column he asked the question — Which of the following is the nearest living relative of the dinosaur, Tyrannosaurus rex? (a) a chicken, (b) a crocodile, (c) a lizard, or (d) an elephant. The correct answer was a chicken.

This was based upon the article in the New York Times based upon a manuscript published in Science.

Scientists at the University of Wisconsin had shown that the mechanism involved in long bone growth was similar for chickens and dinosaurs.

However, these findings did not satisfy paleontologists, who believe the correct answer to Dave Barry's question is a crocodile. One reason being that crocodiles also share the same mechanism of long bone growth with chickens.

It is clear from reading several recent articles in Science that the controversy has not subsided. One of these articles focused upon the structure of the pelvic bones of baby dinosaurs.

There are two types of birds based upon the physiological status at hatching. "Precocious" birds, such as chickens or turkeys, are active at hatching and are able to seek their own food and water. The second type, "altricial," are totally dependent upon their parents for food during their early days of life. Examples of this type of bird are robins, finches, and pelicans. Part of the reason altrical birds are immobile and stay in the nest is that their pelvic bones are poorly calcified and therefore do not support or foster mobility at hatching.

This brings us back to the recent article in Science describing the pelvic structure of baby dinosaurs. The structure of the dinosaur pelves suggest that they hit the ground running similar to precocious birds such as the chicken turkey, and ostrich. However, this does not satisfy those who think dinosaurs are more closely related to reptiles, since crocodiles are also precocious. Thus, the bird vs. reptile argument continues to simmer.

A second recent article in Science adds support to the dinosaur-chicken relationship. At a recent meeting of paleontologists, there were reports describing the finding of new fossils in Madagascar, Spain, and Argentina. These fossils provide further evidence that dinosaurs are at the root of the avian tree.

These missing links include birds with dinosaur-like claws and skulls, and dinosaurs with bird-like pelves and shoulders.

Finally, a Chinese anthropologist described finding a dinosaur fossil that seemed to have feather-like structures along the nape of the neck and spinal column. Obviously, these findings have made the paleontologists supporting the bird-dinosaur connection ecstatic.

However, there are those who remain unconvinced it's biophysically impossible to evolve flight from such large bipeds with foreshortened forelimbs and heavy tails characteristic of dinosaurs. It is believed that that is exactly the wrong anatomy for flight. From this discussion it is clear that the answer to Dave Barry's original column is still controversial.

Stay tuned for "Are Birds Babe Dinosaurs? Part 3.

Note: You may wonder about our fascination with the bird-dinosaur controversy. Our laboratory focuses on the mechanisms involved in avian skeletal development. Information on dinosaurs comes almost exclusively from the skeletal remains present in fossils. Finally, I am considered the "department dinosaur" by my Poultry Science colleagues.

Get MOOOvin' (REAL) with Milk!

Getting rid of those annoying hang-ups in your operation is easier than ever.

The new SURGE® One Touch™ makes stanchion milking as easy as this. A lightweight, gun-grip design integrates the milk line and pulsation connections into one simple process. Yet it's built incredibly tough to handle the real world demands of the dairy barn.

Most importantly, One Touch brings high-tech automation to stanchion operators with two optional management modules.

The TIMEKEEPER™ II module signals you when the cow finishes milking and displays how long she took to milk...promoting fast, consistent milking that leads to better udder health.

The Milk Yield Module measures individual cow production and milking time, allowing instant analysis of each cow's performance.

By putting today's production information at your fingertips, the SURGE One Touch lets you capture your cow's performance in the palm of your hand.

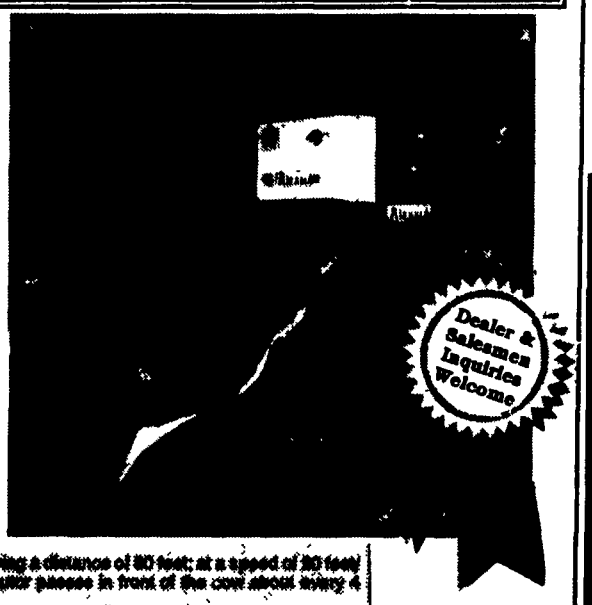
The PA Farm Show...
ALFRED
The new Automatic Forage Distributor

Airablo is proud to present "Alfred", the new automatic forage distributor

Whether it's silage, square or round bales, "Alfred' services directly to the animals without any effort on your part

Operating on a rail placed in front of the animals, the distributor moves along at a slow pace, permitting the cows to eat directly from the round bale, basket or hopper as it passes before them



This system of feeding has several important advantages
- It assures a constant, fresh supply of forage in front of the cow
- Less waste
- Repeated small feedings stimulate a cow s overall consumption
- Better assimilation of feed
- Completely eliminates manipulation of forage in front of the cow

Whether it's a hay basket or a silage hopper attached to a round bale feeder, "Alfred" allows you to distribute two types of forage at the same time with one control panel and one carriage system

An electric rail feeds the system and can work 24 hours a day if desired , CSA and UL certified, this system eliminates the use of batteries and assures low maintenance costs

Only Airablo feeders allow the complete forage feeding system with a minimum of maintenance and mechanical upkeep thanks to Airablo's dedication to innovation.

Punctual and trustworthy, "Alfred" is cost effective and built to save you time and effort.

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency; this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Protect your valuable feeds from the elements... increase the efficiency of your feeds, your animals, and your labor.

"IF YOU NEED A SILO...
YOU NEED TO CALL BOB FRANCIS...
There will be a modest price increase effective January 1, And besides our schedule is already filling in. Don't wait too late and be disappointed.

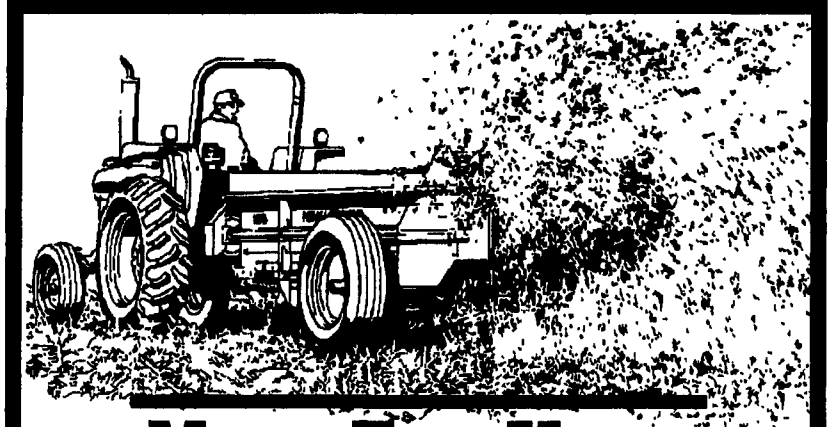
NO. 1 SPREADER



MADE FOR HARD WORK AND HEAVY LOADS

The choice of farmers in North America year after year, New Holland box spreaders can be counted on to do the heavy work that can't wait.

The model 145 hauls up to 177 bushels of material on one load. The rugged A-frame hitch carries the load safely from below and does not pull it from the front.

Of course, the sides and floor boards will be replaced free for 12 years, if they fail. And only your New Holland dealer can offer this Bonded Protection.

Quality Gehl In Stock At Binkley & Hurst Bros. "Let's Get Together Now!" Binkley & Hurst Bros. Has A Quality Gehl Spreader At Economical Pricing!

GEHL Box Spreaders

Even when it's empty... it's loaded.

Low profile design means easy loading by skid loader front end loader or barn cleaner

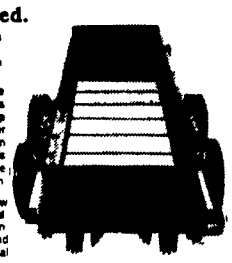
Gehl-Tuff Flooring prevents the apron from freezing to the floor allowing manure to slide out with little resistance. Less apron pull means less wear and tear on drives and apron chains. One piece construction won't flex under heavy loads

Extra-strong, T-bar apron chains with an average tensile strength of over 23,500 pounds keep the biggest loads moving

Double Galvanized steel sides are corrosion resistant for long life. One-piece seamless construction won't catch material or leak

Optional hydraulic endgate rests in front of the beater paddles to secure sloppy loads and keep heaped material out of the beater until you're ready to spread. An available later pan reduces spills in the yard or roadway while enhancing the spread distribution

Oscillating tandem wheels allow faster ground speeds while providing greater flotation. They're standard on the 325 bushel and 425 bushel models and optional on the 250-bushel model



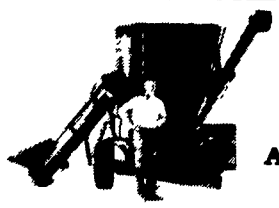
Twelve extra wide one-piece beater paddles are symmetrically positioned for broad, uniform spreads. Paddles are fabricated from tough, 1/4" thick high strength steel. Bolt-on replacement tips are available to extend paddle life

Constant velocity pto for continuous smooth chatter free power transfer when spreading on turns and reduced stress on the entire drive line

Huge 425 Bushel Ready To Put To Work Hydraulic Drive

Most Mix-All owners will never buy another.

Model MX125 And Model MX170



In fact, you'd probably have a hard time convincing Gehl Mix-All® owners to even look at anything else. And why should they?

The Mix-All's big 21-inch wide hammermill features 66 reversible thin hammers that cut, rather than pound the feed to deliver a more consistent grind and ensure uniform mixing for a better feed conversion rate.

Gehl's self-contained hydraulic system is designed-in, not added on. It provides the precision of infinitely variable in-feed attachment control to match tractor power for greater grinding capacity. Plus you get fast, smooth, trouble-free unloading with greater reliability.

And a wide variety of options and attachments lets you customize your Mix-All to fit any operation.

KINZE ROW UNITS

You start with a simple, dependable row unit design with easy adjustments that give you exact depth control, and the most ideal seed-to-soil contact possible. At KINZE we call it "Precision Placement." Simply put, it's the toughest most dependable system in the field today.

How does it work? At the exact point of seed placement, 15" double disc openers and dual gauge wheels combine to mold a clean, consistent V-formed seed trench at a pre-set depth. Trailing V-closing wheels then securely press the seed trench walls on each side of the seed for positive seed-to-soil contact, virtually eliminating air pockets and leaving a loose "hill" of soil on top of the seed. It's the ideal environment for the emerging seeding.

Each row unit is indpendently adjustable for depth and down pressure. Spring-loaded parallel arms give you all the flexibility you need. Down pressure? Your choice. Standard, quick-adjustable dual springs for conventional planting, or quad springs (shown right) for conservation tillage. Each with four positions so you can set the unit's down force for your conditions.

THE KEY TO EARLY SEED GERMINATION

Simply & Precisely

Discover the simplicity and efficiency of KINZE 2000 Series Planters. The clean, uncluttered toolbars. The wide variety of planting and fertilizer options. The ease of maintenance. The efficient, mechanical technology of the KINZE row unit and seed meters. (Seed meters which precisely singulate corn, soybeans, milo and cotton with more accuracy and more dependability than any other metering systems in the field today.) The unique, patented push unit design which eliminates the cost and congestion of side-by-side units. The ability to fold, flex and adapt.

Discover KINZE today, because the more you know about planters, the better you'll feel about KINZE. See your KINZE Dealer for all the details.

The NEW LEADER L3020

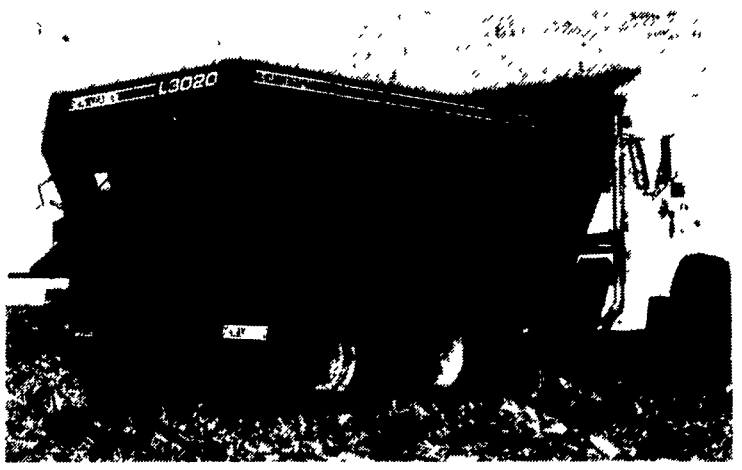
Heavy Duty LIME SPREADER



For more than 50 years, New Leader has aggressively met and exceeded market demand by producing the most dependable, adaptable and durable spreaders in the industry. The heavy-duty L-3020 spreader is a direct result of New Leader's unmatched experience in the agricultural equipment field. Designed for high-volume applications of ag-lime and gypsum, the rugged and resilient L-3020 is also suitable for spreading fertilizer and hauling aggregate material. Equipped with an optional swinging rear endgate, the L-3020 can be quickly and efficiently converted into a controlled discharge, no-hoist dump system for stockpiling. The L-3020's standard 30-inch wide conveyor system virtually eliminates the material bridging that's common with narrower conveyor spreaders. The versatile L-3020 broadcasts ag-lime at rates up to six tons per acre and fertilizer at rates as low as 150 pounds per acre.

Other Available Features:

- Complete body in 304 or 409 stainless steel
- Mounts on vehicles equipped with highway, semi or full flotation tires
- An optional ladder that attaches to either the left-or right-hand-side of the unit.
- Optional heat-and petroleum - resistant conveyor belting available for transport and application of hot asphalt.

Reaching the top is easier if you have the AGCO® Allis 7600 tractor pulling you up.

Make Your Way Up Your Own Corporate Ladder.

The 89 PTO hp engine has the power to muscle through most any job. This multi-purpose, row-crop tractor has a standard synchronized transmission with 24 forward and 12 reverse speeds. For your convenience, you can choose between the cab or rops with an optional canopy.

- A direct air-cooled diesel engine powers the tractor and delivers maximum strength through the full speed range. So you're able to get more work done using less fuel, doing less shifting and requiring less effort to operate the tractor.
- This also lets you match engine power to ground speeds for more efficient field work.
- The AWD models feature true centerline drive shaft for more efficient power transfer and less maintenance.
- Like always, every AGCO Allis tractor comes with a 4-year/ 4,000-hour warranty that's backed by your dealer.

To see what the 7600 tractor can do for you, just stop by and see us. You'll be surprised at how fast you'll climb.

BELARUS VALUE. IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

Introducing two big changes in how small jobs get done. The 8011L and 9011L offer a low clearance design and tight turning radius that provide even higher levels of maneuverability. Yet they still manage to offer the same durability, value and affordability you expect from Belarus.

Choose from the 8011L and its tough 81 hp four cylinder water cooled engine or the 9011Ls turbo charged 98 hp. Both engines have strong torque characteristics. Add it all up and you've got utility tractors ideal for every type of operation from orchards and vineyards to poultry operations and grounds maintenance.

But the exceptional value doesn't stop there. The 8011L and 9011L offer excellent lift capacity for front end loader applications. Other impressive features include power assisted steering and a fully adjustable seat for operator comfort and convenience.

Combined with their ease of maintenance and servicing, it's not hard to see how Belarus makes even the smallest jobs easier in a big way. That's Belarus value.

Granger Forges Firsts By Doing Her Job

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LINCOLN UNIVERSITY (Chester Co.) — Betsy Huber goes to the Pennsylvania Farm Show every year. She doesn't take livestock, food, or clothing to exhibit. Instead, she's one of the persons who mans the Grange booth, where members and visitors stop by to ask questions and purchase the organization's cookbooks.

But Betsy's prime claim to fame is her recent election that named her overseer of the state Grange. The overseer position is comparable to vice president. Although the Grange has always been an equal opportunity for men and women, Betsy is the first woman named to this position in Pennsylvania.

Being the first woman to assume a position of leadership is nothing new to Betsy. She is also her township's first woman supervisor.

"I'm not a woman's libber or anything, but I think woman are as capable as men are to fill many of these positions," Betsy said.

Betsy's Grange involvement is long and impressive. Since both her grandparents and parents were active members of Chester County's Goshen Grange, Betsy attended Grange activities and became a Junior Granger when she was 5 years old.

Fond memories of Grange-sponsored Christmas pageants, craft workshops, and meetings flood her mind.

She said, "Lots of my cousins also belonged to the Goshen Grange, and even the members who weren't related seemed like family to me."

Those strong early-childhood ties have influenced Betsy to continue her membership at the Goshen Grange although it is a 45 minute drive from where she now lives and another Grange is within two miles of her home.

Through many years of Grange involvement, Betsy surmises that she has held every office possible at Goshen and at the county level.

At one time the Goshen Grange had 150 members, which has now shrank to about 55.

"Urbanization has changed people's philosophies," Betsy said of the reason for dwindling membership that faces the Grange and other organizations in all areas.

"People aren't as quick to join organizations. But I think they are making a mistake. The Grange's emphasis is on family activities and community service. The Grange is one of the few places where the whole family can participate at the same time," she said.

The benefits of Grange involvement go far beyond family activities for Betsy.

She said, "The Grange teaches leadership, discipline, and self-confidence."

Even when Betsy spent two years away from home studying library science in college, she remained active in the Grange. As a teen-ager Betsy had the requirement that her husband-to-be needed to be a Grange member.

When she first met Henry, her husband-to-be, he wasn't a member, but she easily persuaded him to become one. Since then, he, too, has held many positions at the local and county Grange levels. Two of the couple's three children who are now adults continue the family tradition of Grange involvement.

Chester County has 14 individual granges that meet together quarterly.

"Between 1968 and 1970, two things got me more involved in the Grange in the county and state levels," she said.

One was when her uncle became president at the county (called Pomona) level. He asked Betsy to become youth president. Through her leadership involvement, Betsy became acquainted with many Grangers outside her area. During this time, her cousin was also selected as national prince for the Grange. This gave her a much broader scope of Grange activities.

On the state and national level, the Grange concentrates on rural issues in its political involvement.

For 15 years, Betsy and her husband also attended the Grange's Young Married Weekend, where they met couples from across the state who shared similar interests and goals. Annually one of these couples was selected to attend the National Convention. Selection was based on grange and community involvement, knowlege and an interview with judges. In 1971, Betsy and her husband were selected to attend the national convention.

"We met people from across the state and we remain good friends today," Betsy said.

Many of those couples now hold state offices.

During those years, Betsy's personal life was also a time of change.

After working in the library at West Chester College for a number of years, she quit after the birth of her second child to start an in-home sewing business, which she maintained for 11 years.

When the Huber's youngest child entered school, Betsy went to work part time as a secretary for the National Grange Women's Activities director.

"My knowlege of sewing, needlework, and the grange enabled me help plan nationwide contests. Each year, grange members could compete in sewing, needlework, stuffed pillow top, and quilt contests.

In addition to organizing and handling the details, Betsy contacted large corporations to offer prizes and sponsor the contests.

"I loved that job, but when our son started college, I needed a full-time job," Betsy said.

Again the Grange held the answer. She became office manager for the Pennsylvania State Grange office in Harrisburg.

For three years, she daily made the one and a half hour trip to Harrisburg and back.

Although the distance required her to leave her home at 6 a.m. and she didn't return until 6:30 p.m., Betsy thrived on the job.

But the daily commute had its drawbacks. In 1992, Rep. Art Hershey offered her a job as a legislative aide in his office. His office was only five minutes from her home. Through her Grange involvement, she had become acquainted with the political process and had gained a lot of respect for Rep. Hershey.

Betsy accepted the offer and continues to work there today.

"At first the job was a big adjustment. At the Grange, I knew the answers whenever people called, but I didn't know any of the answers at Rep. Hershey's office. People call into the office about all types of problems."

Gradually, Betsy learned who to contact about constituents' problems.

"There are experts in every field in Harrisburg to steer people in the right direction. Something is new every day. It's a very interesting job," she said.

Since her recent appointment as overseer to the Pennsylvania State Grange, Betsy has cut back to a four-day work week so that she can travel to fulfill Grange duties.

"Rep. Hershey himself is a Grange member. He is very supportive of my involvement in the Grange," Betsy said.

To improve communication between state and local granges, Betsy said that more specifics will be reported in the Advocate, the official newsletter for the Grange.

Some people believe that the Grange is a secret organization. That belief is a bit misleading according to Betsy, who said membership is open to all.

The purpose of a secret password to gain entrance to grange meetings was instilled at the inception of the Grange in 1867. It was to keep out spies from labor unions that were trying to take over the railroads that the farmers were trying to use. According to Betsy, it isn't the secret password but rather the fraternalism it invokes that gives the feeling of a family having the same ideals and working for the same purpose," Betsy said.

The password is selected at the national level and enables members to attend any grange meeting across the U.S. The secret password changes from year to year and is as innocent as the previously used password "concerned."

The password and other fraternalism of the Grange are not meaningless rituals but a method used to conduct meetings that promotes order just like parliamentary procedure does in other meetings, according to Betsy.

The Grange is nonsectarian but instills strong Christian values and love for country.

Betsy is also active at Avondale Presbyterian Church in choir, bell choir, and served a three-year term on the board of trustees.

She enjoys counted cross-stitch,

(Turn to Page E9)

"Urbanization has changed people's philosophies," Betsy said of the reason for dwindling membership that faces the Grange and other organizations. The log home that the Huber family built has open space surrounding it but housing developments are visible in the distance. Because the Grange is one of the few places where the whole family can participate at the same time, she believes the Grange meets a societal need.

The Grange is well-known for publishing several outstanding cookbooks. Several of Betsy's recipes are published in Grange cookbooks, which are on sale at its booth during the Pennsylvania Farm Show. During the holidays, Betsy made many Raisin Nut Breads to give as gifts. The bread is baked in a used, clean tin can. When removed and sliced, the small, round slices are attractive to serve on a plate to guests.

Confident Cooking With Beef

Beef is nutritious and healthful. It supplies essential nutrients. And due to leaner cattle and closer trimming of fat, the beef you buy today is 27 percent leaner than it was 20 years ago.

In fact, beef consumption by Americans has been rising steadily since 1993. Beef's share of retail meat sales is equal to poultry, pork, and seafood combined.

Beef is the number one choice in retail meat purchases. Thanks to more standardized cuts, improved labeling and more nutrition and cooking information available at the point of sale, it's easier to choose the right cut of beef for your family.

Beef prices are at their lowest in seven years, so if you stock your freezer with great beef buys, you'll have the makings for great sandwiches and the other recipes included in this section.

Steaks and roasts (tightly wrapped in heavy-duty aluminum foil or freezer bags) will keep up to 12 months at 0 degree F; ground beef can be frozen up to four months. Be sure to label and date each package.

For more recipes and detailed instructions on cooking with beef, a new 36-page brochure from the Beef Council is available. For a copy of "Confident Cooking with Beef, send a self-addressed business-sized envelope to the Pa. Beef Council, 4714 Orchard St., Harrisburg, PA 17109.

SERVE-A-CROWD BEEF STEAK

3 pound boneless beef round steak, cut 1-inch thick
2 tablespoons chili powder
2 tablespoons packed brown sugar
3 cloves garlic, crushed
1 tablespoon hot pepper sauce
2 medium onions, sliced, separated into rings
12-ounce bottle chili sauce
10 crusty rolls, split or 20 medium tortillas, warmed
Toppings: thinly sliced lettuce, chopped onion and chopped cilantro (optional)

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Place 28x18-inch piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil in shallow roasting pan; place beef steak in center of foil. In small bowl, combine chili powder, brown sugar, garlic, and pepper sauce, mixing until well blended. Spread on both sides of steak; top with onions and chili sauce. Bring two opposite ends of foil up over steak; seal with double fold. Seal ends of foil to close. Bake in 325 degree oven 1½ -2 hours or until beef is tender.

Remove onions and juices to medium saucepan. Bring to a boil; cook and stir 3 minutes or until slightly reduced. Meanwhile trim fat from steak. ROASTED RIBEYE AND ROOT VEGETABLES

4- to 6-pound well-trimmed beef ribeye roast, small end
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 pounds small new potatoes, halved
16-ounce package baby carrots
2 medium onions, cut into 1-inch thick wedges

Seasoning:

4 large clove garlic, crushed
2 teaspoons dried thyme leaves
1½ teaspoons cracked black pepper

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Combine seasoning ingredients; press half the mixture evenly into surface of beef roast. Add oil and 1 teaspoon salt to remaining seasoning mixture; reserve. Place roast, fat side up, on rack in shallow roasting pan. Insert ovenproof meat thermometer so tip is centered in thickest part, not resting in fat. Do not add water or cover. Roast in 350 degree oven approximately 1¾ -2 hours for medium rare; 2 to 2½ -hours for medium doneness.

Meanwhile in large bowl, combine potatoes, carrots, onions, and reserved seasoning mixture; toss to coat. Arrange vegetables on 15x10-inch jelly roll pan. During last 60 minutes of roasting beef; put vegetables in oven.

Remove roast to carving board when meat thermometer registers 135 degrees for medium rare, 150 degrees for medium. Increase oven temperature to 450 degrees; continue roasting vegetables 15 minutes or until tender and lightly browned, stirring once. While the vegetables cook, temperature of roast will continue to rise 10 degrees to reach desired doneness. Carve roast into slices; serve with vegetables.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

ANSWER — J. Gehman, Newburg, wanted a basic bagel recipe. Thanks to Cathy Funderwhite, Lancaster, for sending a recipe.

Bagels

2 packages yeast
4¼ to 4½ cups flour
1½ cups lukewarm water
3 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt

Combine yeast and 1¾ cups flour, then add water, sugar, and salt to yeast mixture. Beat at low speed for ½ minute, constantly scraping the sides of bowl, then beat at high speed for 3 minutes. Stir in enough of remaining flour to make a moderately stiff dough, then turn out onto a lightly floured board and knead until smooth. Cover and let rest for 15 minutes.

Divide the dough into 12 portions. Shape into smooth balls and punch a hole in the center with a floured finger. Pull gently to enlarge hole, keeping uniform shape. Cover and let rise 20 minutes.

Add 1 teaspoon sugar to 1 gallon water and bring to a boil. Reduce to simmer. Cook bagels in simmering water 4 to 5 at a time for seven minutes, turning once, then drain on a paper towel. Sprinkle with topping if desired. Place on an ungreased baking sheet in 375 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes. Yields 12 bagels (at 155 calories per bagel without toppings or raisins.

'Dairy Derby' A Must-See For Kids

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — There is plenty for kids to do at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

A must for kids on their Farm Show tour is the "Dairy Derby" TV-style game show where kids and adults have the chance to win hundreds of dollars.

"Dairy Derby" was created by the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Association (MAMMA) to teach Farm Show visitors all about the dairy industry.

Kids can also pick up lots of "That Milk Thing" stuff at the "Dairy Derby" exhibit. There will be free coloring books, erasers, pencils and much more at the booth every day. On Monday, Jan. 13, at 3 p.m., three local celebrity mascots will join "That Milk Thing" for an exciting "Dairy Derby" game. The proceeds from that game will benefit area charities.

To play the game, four people are selected from the crowd. The contestants are asked questions about milk, dairy products, and the dairy industry. The first person to answer five questions correctly gets a chance to enter the Cash Cube.

In the Cash Cube is a whirlwind of money. The contestant wins all the money he or she can grab and put through a small slot. Everyone goes away a winner.

"Dairy Derby" is located in the Main Exhibit Hall at booths 338, 339, 348, and 349. The show will run every day between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Games for children will be held throughout the day.

Those youngsters wanting to play "Dairy Derby" should ask the game show hosts about special game time for children.

Dairy Derby is the TV-style game show created by MAMMA to teach Pennsylvania Farm Show visitors about dairy products and the dairy industry. Special game time is also held for children 10 years old and older. If you want to participate, talk to the game show host on duty when you stop by the booth.

Smart Stuff
WITH TWIG WALKINGSTICK
Can snowmen get fleas?
Well, they can get snowfleas
Adult snowfleas love to sun themselves on the surface of snow on warm winter days But don't look for just one snowflea walking along They are so tiny — about the width of a sharpened pencil tip — that you can only find them when they are in groups
To find snowfleas, look for patches of snow that look like a rust stain or sprinkled pepper The patches will look like they're moving, too If you put your hand in among the flecks and they seem to disappear before your eyes or jump on your hand, you've found a group of snowfleas
Snowfleas don't suck blood like animal fleas They only eat decaying plants and fungi These wingless insects are like fleas, though, in their amazing ability to jump. Snowfleas have a forked tail that's hooked onto the end of their belly Most of the time the tail is held under the belly by two hooks But when a snowflea releases the hooks, the tail springs out, pushes against the ground and sends the insect flying through the air
Snowfleas are part of a group of insects called springtails These primitive bugs are one of the most common group of insects on earth — so no matter where you travel, there will always be some relative of the snowflea moving under foot!
Scientifically yours,
Twig

If you like to color, a free coloring book is available to kids who stop by the Dairy Derby exhibit located in the Main Exhibit Hall at booths 338, 339, 348, and 349 during the Pennsylvania Farm Show. Kids can also pick up free erasers, pencils, and other stuff featuring "That Milk Thing."

Here is one of the pictures from the coloring book called "Sightings of That Milk Thing Throughout American History." The book is a brief lesson on the nation's colorful and exciting history. In a humorous way it introduces children to the people who helped to shape the United States. And also teaches children that milk comes from cows that live on farm and how milk is turned into other delicious products.

Taking Time by Rebecca Escott

The More It Snows ...

When those first snow flakes begin to fall, kids are excited. But after a few inches of snow and a few days off school, snow days become stressful for kids and their parents. If some day this winter, you find your kids wandering around, acting a bit like Winnie the Pooh, singing, "The more it snows tidely-pom, the more it goes tiddely-pom, the more it goes tiddely-pom on snowing," you'll know it's time for snow day relief.

Parents need to find a balance between providing suggestions to their children and allowing their children to come up with their own activities when they are bored or stir-crazy. Early childhood education researchers have found that children don't really start being creative in their play until they've been at it for at least an hour. So in some ways, it is good for adults to urge children to play freely with an activity rather than shuffling one idea after another in front of them every 20 minutes or so.

However, reality says that whining kids are annoying. And when your child whines about having nothing to do on a day at home, you can be prepared. You may even want to write ideas down on slips of paper. Place them in a box. The next time your child whines, direct her to draw a slip from the box and follow the directions. Here are several ideas to get your snow day activity box started.

Write thank you notes for the gifts received over the holidays. Make homemade stationery using stamps, watercolors, etc., for the letters.

"Spray paint" designs in the snow or on snow sculptures. Make a fairly strong concentration of food coloring and water in a spray bottle. Then allow your child to "paint" the snowscape with this solution. This is a great finishing touch to a morning's snow sculpting. Set strict rules about spraying away from others. This activity is best if done with only a few children.

Put together a puzzle. Or make a puzzle from an old calendar picture glued to poster board. Play any kinds of alphabet game. For instance, call out a letter. How many girls names can you think of that begin with "G?" Or work through the alphabet thinking of country names/capitals, etc.

On a snow day, "work" can be a great activity. Involve children in household tasks. They should help shovel walks and clean off cars. Ask them to peruse the cookbooks and select a meal for the day and then help prepare it. Do newspapers need to be bundled for recycling? Animal cages cleaned out? These tasks can be interspersed with other activities throughout the day.

When they've finished, let them enjoy target shooting with snow balls. Be sure they get an adult's okay of what can be used for a target. Tree trunks, old cinder blocks, and barrels are good options. Or if they've been outside too long, play a game of indoor balloon volleyball. Clear some floor space in the den/living room. String a piece of yarn between the backs of two chairs. Have children positioned on opposite sides of the string and bat a balloon back and forth with their hands. I encourage children to play this game on their knees (knee pads increase comfort) to keep the level of activity a bit more controlled.

For a less physical activity, challenge your school-age child's map-reading skills. Find an old map. Ask your child to mark out routes between two locations (maybe your home and their grandparent's). Put different conditions on the route like only using small roads, not crossing water, or choosing a route that passes through the most communities. Explain that the map he is drawing on is being donated for this activity and that he can't draw on the maps you use regularly.

When the other ideas have been used, ask your older kids to label photographs for you and to arrange them in albums. Even if they don't get many labeled, they'll love to look back over the pictures taken and to recall fun times spent together as a family.

Perhaps 1997 won't bring us much snow. But if it does, clip this column to help you and your children keep your sanity. Happy snow days.

Sara Jane Krall shows off two dresses that she is entering in state competition after winning at the Lebanon Area Fair. Since 1978, Sara has been entering her sewing projects at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show and winning ribbons every year.

Face Behind Those Blue Ribbons In Farm Show Smocking Competition

LOU ANN GOOD

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — If you are one of the crowd who admires the clothing display at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, you have probably "oohed and ahhed" over entries stitched by Sara Jane Krall.

Her entries include smocked dresses, blouses, ornaments and tailored suits. This Lebanon County farm wife has been entering her sewing projects since 1978. Every year, she picks up several third to first-place ribbons.

"I guess it's the competition that keeps me entering," Sara Jane said. "But it's no big deal if it doesn't place."

Her fine, precise stitching is often detailed with the time-consuming art of smocking.

"I always have at least one project going," Sara Jane said of her smocking that she does not only on dresses, blouses, nightgowns, and sweatshirts but also Christmas ornaments.

The ornaments are easily slipped into her purse so that she can work on them while waiting in the doctor's office or whenever she has a few extra minutes.

Even dolls are lucky enough to wear smocked dresses by blue-ribbon winner Sara Jane Krall.

The smocked ornaments in bell, ball, and drum shapes are given as gifts or used to decorated the family tree.

Sara Jane, wife of Arthur Krall, said that her sewing expertise is the result of necessity.

"When our sons were young, they needed slim clothing, but it wasn't sold in stores for boys at that time," she said.

In order to dress her sons in clothing that fit, she started sewing all their pants and some shirts.

Before that, she had sewn her own clothing after learning sewing skills in 4-H classes.

The Kralls had three sons and a daughter. That's when Sara Jane discovered the joy of smocking.

At first she marked the fabric by hand, "but now I do English smocking," she said.

This means that she has a machine that automatically pleats the fabric in preparation for smocking.

Although she taught herself smocking from reading a book, Sara Jane did take several extension courses in smocking and sewing after she completed several projects.

Sara Jane said that she was hesitant to enter competition in the beginning, fearing that her items weren't good enough.

In 1971, she began to enter the Lebanon Fair. After seven years of success there, she braved state competition and was pleased with the ribbons garnered.

"But I learned that there are big differences in judges. Sometimes an entry that I only got a third-place at the county fair will take a first-place at the Farm Show," she said.

Sometimes it works the other way. Sara Jane believes that the judging is more precise at the county level where more people serve as judges than at the state level where two judges cover many categories.

Although Sara Jane has won many ribbons over the years, her biggest surprise was in 1991 when she won best of show over all sewing categories during the Farm Show's anniversary year.

That year, like every year, Sara Jane had dropped off her entries at the Lebanon County Extension. County agents took along the entries. The next day, home economist Alletta Schadler voiced concern that the child's smocked dress was lost. Sara Jane traveled to the Farm Show and looked through all the entries herself and was dismayed that it was missing. However, as she turned the corner at the end of the display she noticed the dress with a best of show ribbon attached.

Smocked ornaments such as this one decorates the Krall's holiday tree and that of other family members and friends.

"That was a complete surprise. I never expected that," she said. "The dress hadn't even taken a first place at the county level."

Which just goes to show you can't second-guess judges. It's also a good reason for others to enter.

This year, Sara Jane expects to enter a tailored wool skirt and four smocked dresses.

"I always drop off my entries at the extension. If they wouldn't take the entries up and pick them up when the show's finished, I wouldn't bother to enter," she said.

The Kralls have five grandchildren, three of whom are granddaughters. Although the one is still young enough to wear dresses with her grandmother's smocking, two have joined 4-H and are entering their own sewing projects.

While smocking is typically considered something only girls wear, Sara Jane has a delightful pattern for little boys. It's a sweat shirt that has a smocked insert with trains on it.

In addition to girls dresses, she also does smocking in nightgowns and women's blouses.

THE SEVEN JOYS OF VEGETABLE GARDENING

Is growing vegetables more work and trouble than growing flowers? In 1997 keeping a vegetable garden is no more trouble than a flower garden and, for many gardeners, the rewards are even greater because (in one sense) you can have your garden and eat it too.

Make a New Year's resolution to grow vegetables in your garden in 1997. Not only does a neatly tended vegetable garden look great, but you can enjoy many of the fruits of your labors throughout the year. Here are seven reasons (resolutions) to start a vegetable garden:

Exercise: Gardening does require some work, but this can easily be considered exercise. Stretch to pull that nasty crabgrass . . . dig to remove that dandelion root . . . breathe deeply to fill your lungs with fresh air. All of these gardening activities help to burn up calories and increase your physical well-being.

Food: An obvious benefit to vegetable gardening is that it results in good things to eat. And fresh vegetables always taste better. In fact, the exceptional flavor of home-grown food is one major reason why people grow vegetables.

Health: Fresh vegetables are health foods. Most vegetables have traveled hundreds of miles to be on display at the grocery stores. This journey may result in lost vitamins and minerals. The vegetables from your garden offer excellent nutrition containing vitamins and minerals for healthy bodies.

Beauty: A vegetable garden is as pleasing to the eyes as a flower garden. And most vegetables flower before they fruit, so you really do get both in one garden.

Knowledge: Experience is the best teacher. When you garden you can see Nature at work. You can't help but learn about nature and nurturing plants. As a parent, you can share this knowledge with your children.

Self satisfaction: There is something very satisfying about tending a garden and reaping its rewards. One feels almost virtuous. Plus gardening is an occupation that the whole family can do together.

Money savings: The monetary investment in seeds, plants, fertilizer, etc., is minimal. And compared to buying fresh or canned produce you could save a lot of money, especially if you store some of the bounty for the later months.

See Pennsylvania-grown produce in the vegetable room at this year's Pennsylvania Farm Show. The exhibits this year show fresh, value added, frozen, canned and dried vegetables grown and prepared by vegetable processors and home gardeners in the state. Don't miss the largest specimen pumpkin or squash and ask questions at the Penn State Master Gardener table. For more information contact the PA State Farm Show at 717-787-5373.

Any questions regarding the above article can be addressed to Tom Becker, Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-7408.

Mainly Sara gives away the projects that she makes, but sometimes she makes them for others.

"I prefer to buy the material myself because too many people who don't sew don't buy suitable fabric. You must have a soft material."

Although she likes to use plaids and flowered prints for smocking instead of always using pastel colors, this can cause a problem. Through trial and error, Sara Jane said that she learned that colors are important. The smocking may "drown" in the print or plaid. Using a darker or lighter color usually makes it stand out more, but even that can be tricky, she said.

"I learned the hard way. I have a whole stack of mistakes," she said.

Fewer women sew now than when Sara Jane first began entering projects.

"I know that many women work away from home and are too busy to sew. And some things are cheaper to buy than sew, but I still think it's a good idea for every woman to learn to sew the basics. That way they can alter their own clothing and it helps to know what to look for when you are buying clothing, too," she said.

A week before the Farm Show, Sara Jane was sewing a lined suit with a below-the-hip jacket and shawl collar. It features padded shoulders, princess seams, and welt pockets.

According to Sara Jane, the most important step in making a professional appearing suit is a good pressing job.

"You must measure and mark accurately, too. You should not be in a hurry," she said of developing good tailoring skills.

Sara Jane and her husband Arthur live on the 120-acre farm that has been in the family for six generations. Recently their son switched positions with his father and Arthur now works for his son who manages the farm. They have 70 milking cows.

Sara Jane no longer helps with milking. Instead she spends two or three days weekly sewing.

"Smocking is my relaxation. If I have tension, I smock. Then I feel better," she said.

Sara Jane uses this machine to pleat the material in preparation for smocking.

Ready For Tax Time?

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — "Getting Ready for Tax Time: Tips of Home-based Providers" is the title of a workshop to be offered for child care providers in Bradford County. It will be led by staff with Penn State Cooperative Extension's Better Kid Care Program at Penn State University.

The workshop will be shown via satellite on Thursday, January 23 from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. in the meeting room of the Bradford County Extension Office, 701 South Fourth Street, Towanda. Persons who provide child care in their home are invited to attend. Registered child care providers who attend will receive credit for two training hours.

Special guests for the workshop will include an attorney and accountant. Topics to be discussed include tracking income, what expenses are deductible, developing a system for recording expenses, and determining how to deduct home-space use. There will be a call-in time for participants to ask questions of the professionals.

There is no fee to attend the workshop, however, registration is required by January 21. To register contact the Bradford County Extension Office at phone (717) 265-2896, or 701 South Fourth Street, Towanda, PA 18848.

This workshop will be held in the second floor meeting room. If you would like to attend, but are unable to use the stairs, please contact the Extension Office by January 15.

Training costs for child care providers are fully or partially underwritten by the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare, KURC Childcare Directed Training Program.

Charolais Bulls

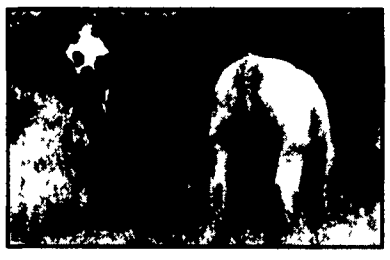
SIRE CALVES THAT TOP THE MARKET.

PROOF. Charolais-sired cattle fit within the guidelines of the National Beef Quality Audit. Feedlots expect and receive higher average daily gains and more efficient feed conversions from Charolais-sired calves. These calves will produce optimum-sized carcasses with a higher percentage of quality retail product and consistently grade Choice with Yield Grades 1s or 2s.

QUALITY. Cattlemen can count on registered Charolais bulls to sire consistent, high-quality calves that are unmistakably Charolais. The identifiable offwhite, yellow, chocolate or smoky influence was seen in market-topping loads of weaned calves across the country in the fall of 1996.

DEMAND. Published market reports and direct order buyers provide evidence Charolais-sired calves consistently top the market. More pounds and a higher price paid per hundred weight target more profit to the cow-calf producer.

PROFIT. Research by the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center and leading universities has documented that Charolais bulls increase performance and profit. Cattlemen who retain ownership on Charolais-sired calves put them in the feedlot sooner, realize heavier and more efficient gains—resulting in earlier marketings and added profits.



Research from Colorado State University Published in the October 1996 Journal of Animal Science

The research evaluates the genetic influences on beef palatability from random matings of Charolais and Limousin sires.

Results and Discussion

- Progeny of Charolais sires were the product of shorter gestation lengths and had heavier 365-day weights, heavier slaughter weights, higher USDA Yield Grades, higher USDA Marbling Scores and higher odds of having carcasses grading USDA Choice - Charolais 51.4%, Limousin 38.2%.
- Progeny of Charolais sires had lower shear force values at 1, 7, 14, 21 and 35-days post-mortem.

ANSWER — June Howes wrote that she needs to replace a broken part on her Pastamatic 700 by Simac. The company is no longer at the address in her owner's manual. If she can't repair hers, she'd like to find someone who has one and can use the parts and many disks that she she has. Jim Willis, Shippensburg, writes that he has one in excellent condition. June may call him at (717) 532-7590.

ANSWER — Mrs. David Weidenhammer, Bernville, wanted to know if anyone has tried to make shampoo and conditioner. Thanks to Pat Sweetman of Stone Haus Herbs who writes that she makes shampoo from an herb called sopwort — 1 tablespoon of the powdered herb to 1 cup water. Let set a few minutes then pour into wet hair. It will not suds as much as commercial products but is very cleansing and wonderful for silks and other fine fabrics. Aloe vera is a great setting gel that leaves your hair shiny, dries quickly and calms curly hair.

Different herbs are good for conditioning dry or oily hair. Herbs can treat dandruff and give shine and body to hair. There are blends that can be used as skin toners, cleansers, bubble baths, and dry shampoo and bath powder as well as lip balms and hand creams. A good source for learning about these would be your local herb shop or library.

ANSWER — Tim Paulus, Pittstown, N.J., wanted to know where he can get an owner's manual for a New Idea Model 323 corn picker. Thanks to Cheryl Miller, Hallem, who writes that a New Idea dealer is Stitzel Farm Equip., Inc., E. Windsor St. & Krick Lane, Hamburg, PA 19526 or call (610) 562-8377.

2. A male's wattles, the red things that dangle from under his beak is larger than the females.
3. The hood or skin covering of the head, which is white and red, will extend further down on the neck of the male bird.

ANSWER — S. Newswanger would like to know of a seed catalog that carries Primula/Chinese Primrose. ANSWER — Evelyn Snooks, Leesburg, Va., wanted to know where to purchase men's socks to make monkey socks. Janet Elsea, Augusta, WV, writes that the socks are available from Gohn Brothers, 105 S. Main, Box 111 Middlebury, IN 46540 or call (219) 825-2400.

Martha Z. Weaver writes that the socks are available from Good's Store, 1338 Main St., East Earl, PA 17519 and from Yoder's Bargain Store, 7806 Salt Creek Rd., Fredericksburg, Ohio 44627-9760. Martha has several instruction sheets on making the monkeys that she will give if you send a self-addressed stamped envelope to her at 361 Iron Bridge Rd., East Earl, PA 17519.

ANSWER — Jim Crater, Mohnton, was looking for organic broom corn to make brooms. Thanks to Sue McCafferty, Spring City, who writes that she grows broom corn. Call her at (610) 948-1463.

Cheese Boost

ROSEMONT, Il. — In an unprecedented response to softening cheese demand over the past several months, the nation's leading dairy marketing and promotion organizations have responded with dollars and resources to help boost awareness for cheese. Major dairy cooperatives, state and regional dairy promotion organizations, and Dairy Management, Inc. (DMI) have collectively contributed more than $2 million toward creating and implementing a special, post-holiday cheese advertising and promotion campaign.

The campaign, to run in January, includes a naitonal print and radio advertising buy and a consumer premium incentive offer. The effort supplements DMI's ongoing $12.7 million national "Cheese to the Rescue" advertising, retail media and promotion campaign.

DMI has stepped forward to lead the creative development and implementation of the joint effort in addition to making a financial contribution of its own. Dollars donated by DMI as well as state and regional dairy organizations will be used for the creative development and media buys, while dairy co-op funds will be used for coupon redemption.

Cheese sales began declining in the third quarter as a result of several marketplace dynamics. Stronger-than-expected milk production, a relatively full pipeline of cheese inventory, plus high retail cheese prices have negatively impacted consumer demand and farmer incomes.

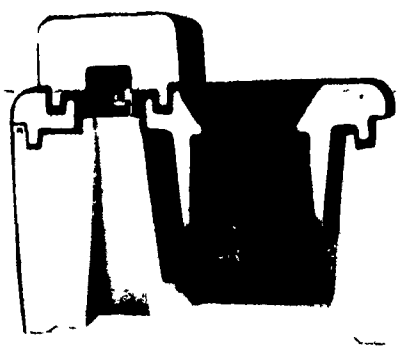
An Electric-Free Fountain from Ritchie



Patent Design/Patent Nos 4 739 727 & 4 646 687

Ritchie Protects From The Cold Too
If you worry about freezing, Ritchie's patented water seal and insulated drink well keep cold air from getting to the valve and prevent heat loss. Plus, our nonmetallic float and valve have proven their resistance against corrosion and cold, with 30 years of time-tested reliability. For extra protection, the optional thermal tube helps prevent supply line freeze-up.

- Automatically compensates for sidehill drift.
- Eliminates excessive pull and stress on hydraulic components associated with other guidance systems.
- Very few moving parts provide smooth, friction-free lateral movement.
- Works effectively on all conventional and ridge-till cultivators, planters and 4-wheel drive articulated tractors.

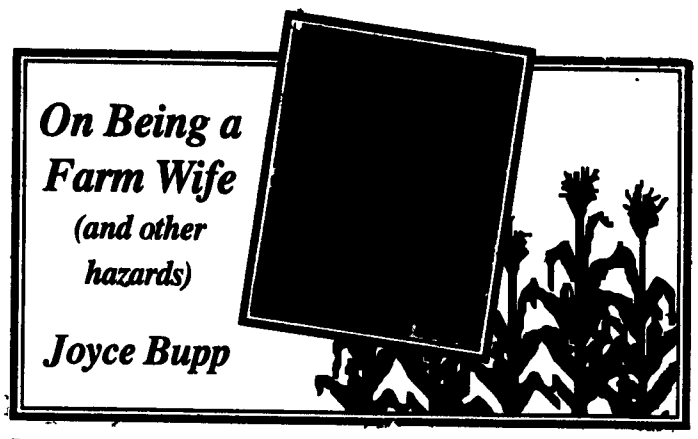
NOTE: Meeting rooms B, C, D, & E are in the Farm Show building on the second floor over the main lobby.



Some rather interesting things happened to us during our nearly three decades of showing cattle at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

In fact, it took a few years of not showing for us to get past the feeling that, in those last few days before the show opened, we should be cleaning out the showbox, clipping cows, running to the store to stock up on snacks, digging out the cow signs and decorations, and laying in a supply of soap for washing cows.

The Farmer always loved showing at Farm Show and called it his "vacation." The kids looked forward to sleeping on bales of straw, endless, noisy card games of Uno with their 4-H friends, and playing practical jokes on innocent visitors to the cattle barns. I always enjoyed the people and visiting with friends but was less enthusiastic about the almost-daily treks back and forth between cows at home and cows at Harrisburg. But sometimes, for a moment or two during Farm Show week, I am temporarily tempted to miss it all.

And then I remember ...

... the year The Farmer and our son, then about 12, bred his two gilts without thinking ahead to when they would farrow with their litters of baby pigs. Yep. You guessed it. On a very cold Sunday morning of Farm Show, the first gilt went into labor. With The Farmer and our daughter camped in Harrisburg, our son and I begged a heat lamp from neighbors, hastily readied a pen and delivered baby pigs. We then rushed to the Show, came home to help milk and found the second gilt in labor. She had problems delivering and though we sat up and kept checking her until about midnight, the piglets were all stillborn.

... or, the year we headed up a day before the cattle were due in with a load of supplies, got a half-mile up Interstate 83 and had several bales of straw tumble off the pickup and fling themselves over both northbound lanes of traffic. Fortunately, no other vehicles hit any of them — nor were hit by any of them. In our haste to pull off the highway and retrieve the bales, we clipped the pickup's right side mirror on a metal post along the road — and broke the glass.

... or, the year we had to pull into a restaurant parking lot across the river from Harrisburg and unload a cow or two because one had fallen in the trailer during the hauling. The cow was fine and the restaurant patrons seemed to be fascinated with the unexpected entertainment.

But, through our years of showing and all those interesting extra-curricular events that struck during Farm Show weeks, we never had any major weather disasters. Oh, there was the predictable ice and snow on the ground and bitter cold that usually hits during that stretch of January. But nothing like the now-legendary Blizzard of '96, which will now bring new life for years to the Farm Show's reputation for generating bad weather.

The kids exhibiting this year — at least some of them — are hoping for a repeat. They liked being snowed in with their animals while Mom and Dad were floundering through drifts back home just to get to the barn. They liked having the complex to themselves. And they liked the festive atmosphere that prevailed as exhibitors banded together to help one another in classic farm fashion.

So what's the likelihood of a rerun of last year's two-feet plus? Probably zip.

But then, again, you know how the weather always is during Farm Show week.

Now that the Christmas trees are gone and the decorations are put away, many folks are paying more attention to houseplants or yearning for something green and growing. Do remember that your houseplants may need more frequent watering as the winter air in your house becomes drier. I find that I need to add an extra watering every week to keep plants growing properly in winter. Be a label reader and be sure to select the right kind of fertilizer to keep them green or flowering. Some fertilizers encourage flowers, others encourage green foliage.

I am very fond of amaryllis flowers and always grow one or two every winter. We are sprouting a red flower in the office this eyar and a new rose colored variety at home. I keep a yard stick standing on the window sill alongside the plant to track how fast the plant grows. It is just amazing. This is a perfect plant for housebound folks or impatient children. Check around, there may be some real bargain-priced leftover amaryllis bulbs in stores. Check before purchasing to be sure they have not been growing excessively in the box. When you hit the winter doldrums and you look around your livingroom and think "oh, yuk!" perk yourself up with a new plant.

The dry winter air in your home is not only hard on plants but also on furniture. You may notice that wood furniture begins to lose deep color and just doesn't seem as rich looking. This is often due to drying out of the wood. You may also find that the wood furniture is sticky or dull from lick-and-a-promise cleaning or switching from an oil polish to a wax polish or spray — not a good idea. Using too much spray or polish and then not rubbing hard to polish dry can also cause problems. Be sure to use a soft clean cloth to do a good job. Another probelm with furniture happens when body oils and perspiration combine with soil. They will soften the finish on the furniture. This most often happens on chair arms, the edges of a dining room table, heardboards of beds and around drawer pulls. It is really important that you clean these areas regularly to prevent softening of the finish. Then use a polish or wax to protect the wood.

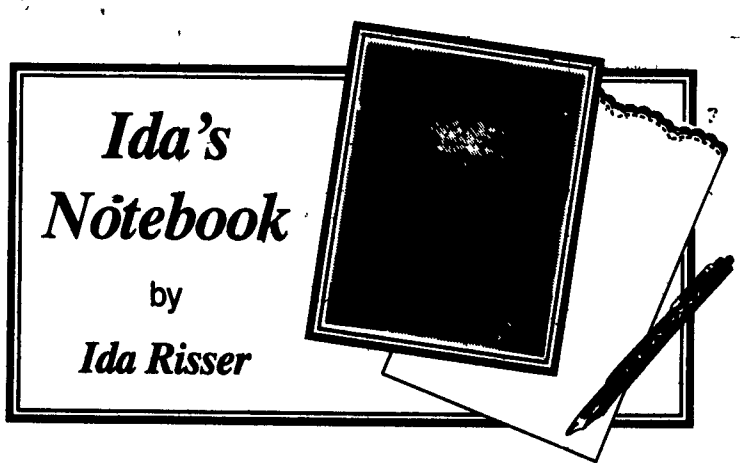
There are several steps you can take to improve the condition of your furniture. The easiest one is to use the polish or spray you normally use. Thoroughly wet a small section at a time with a generous amount of product. Use a circular motion and firm strokes to get up soil. Use a clean, dry cloth and wipe the area immediately while the new polish is moist and the old polish and soil are soft and loosened. Repeat until you have removed the soil. Now, reapply the polish according to directions and buff with a clean cloth.

If this doesn't work and you still have a sticky or dull streaky surface, you may need to remove the oil layers with a household solvent such as odorless mineral spirits that you purchase in a hardware or paint store. Saturate a cloth with a generous amount of solvent, rub over the small area with a circular motion. Wipe off the loosened soil and old polish with a clean dry cloth. Repeat until no more soil appears. After cleaning, apply polish as usual. Don't forget to read instructions about ventilation when using solvents.

If you have antique furniture with the original finish, you should be using paste wax applied very sparingly. If the furniture has been re-finished, you can treat it like new, modern furniture.

If you have solid wood furniture (not veneer) that seems blotchy or dry, you may want to consider using home-made cleaner conditioner made with boiled linseed oil and gum turpentine. We have instructions on how to use this tried and true formula. I do my cherry furniture every other year with amazing results. It is hard work but worth the effort. I will also include information on how to remove water marks and rings from wood furniture. Send a self-addressed stamped long envelope to Alletta Schadler, 2120 Cornwall Road, Suite 1, Lebanon, PA 17042, and ask for furniture cleaner directions.

After you've cleaned the furniture, you'll be able to sit back and admire the reflection of your healthy houseplants and flowers as you sit inside waiting for spring.



Pictures can jog our memories. We remember when the children were young and threw corn to the pigs or when they took honey from their bee hives. There is a picture of them leading 4-H calves. I'm lucky that the names and dates are on the back of each photo.

In my hump-back trunk, together with hundreds of pictures are so many studio pictures that have no identification. Nice looking young ladies and gentlemen dressed in 1850's fashions. It is interesting to see the different hair styles but I would like to know who they are.

Many that I can identify cannot be given to descendants because there are none. Families without children or children who never married now have no one to pass them on to. Some wedding pictures are quite beautiful.

Recently, I was able to give some distant cousins pictures of their mother as a small child, as a young lady, and then also her wedding picture. Another cousin got a posed photo of her mother surrounded by large potted plants.

My mother marked many portraits and some were of neighbors or friends and not necessarily of relatives. She had a teacher, Ida Eby, who she liked very much. Now, I have many pictures of this Eby family but I do not know who to give them to.

The first color pictures were printed about 1940. At this time I traveled across the United States by train. Those pictures have now faded as apparently the method of developing them was not perfected. The pictures of the Grand Canyon and the redwood trees of California are no longer attractive.

I'm sure you've heard it before, but I'll say it again — mark your picture as soon as you get them because future generations will thank you.

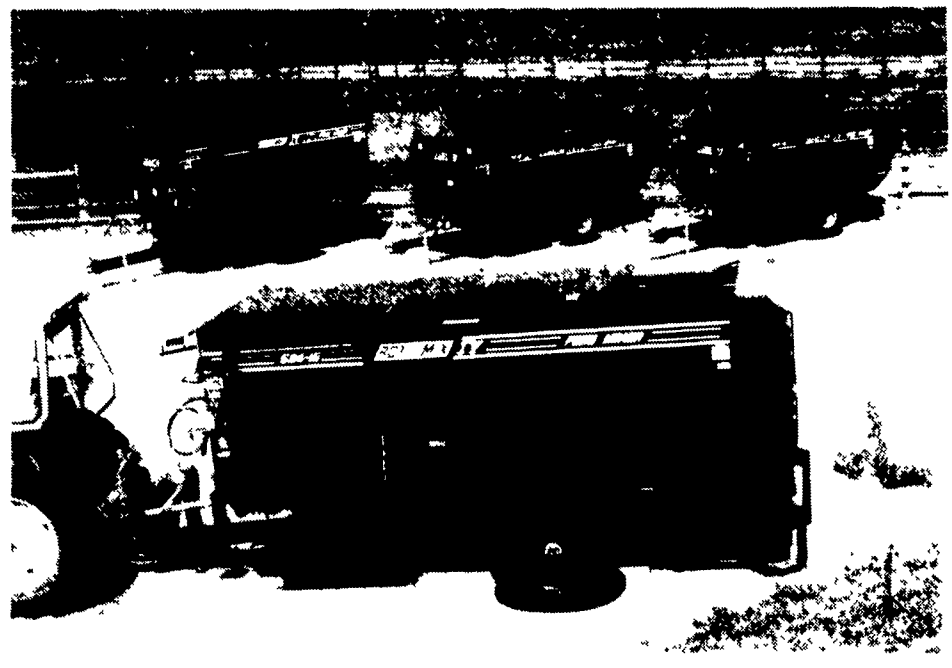
FEED MIXERS



The ROTO-MIX professionals know that quality feed means increased consumption, therefore, higher production levels. With ROTO-MIX IV you reduce fines, minimize shrinkage, and eliminate dead spots. The gentle tumbling aciton mixes fragile flaked and high-moisture ingredients without grinding, resulting in a fluffier, more nutritional ration.

Nothing robs a ration of nutritional value more than fines. Conventional auger mixers use pressure to move the feed through the mixing chamber, thus crushing the feed and creating fines. But the ROTO-MIX patented mixing system uses a rotor to gently lift the feed past the wedging point of the lower side auger, keeping fines to a minimum and reducing nutritional loss.

Even the most nutritious ration is effective only if the cattle eat the complete ration. Improperly mixed feed allows the cattle to "nose out" what they don't want, disrupting the balance of nutrients. But the ROTO-MIX end-to-end...side-to-side mixing system provides the most thorough TMR available, ensuring that your cattle will consume a balanced ration of nutrients in every pound of feed they eat.

"Steak Your Claim" at PA Farm Show

Each January, thousands of consumers flock to Harrisburg for the annual Pennsylvania Farm Show. This year the Pennsylvania Beef Council is encouraging Farm Show visitors to "Steak a Claim" in the great taste of beef and veal. at their specially designed exhibit.

The theme focuses around the era of the Gold Rush times. Consumers are invited to get rich on the essential nutrients of beef and veal, discover at least 49 reasons to make beef and veal part of every meal, and to receive a wide variety of recipes being served from the display chuckwagon. Also, free sample packets of Lea & Perrins Worcestershire sauce can be claimed by all attending.

The Beef Council is also coordinating the meat display in the Farm Show's Food Pantry exhibit area. Beef, veal, pork, and lamb products processed in Pennsylvania will be displayed in a special meat case in the Food Pantry exhibit area. Beef Producers Proactive in Education

In this era of tight school budgets, beef producers throughout Pennsylvania are helping out by offering educational materials to teachers. The materials, offered at little or no cost through the Pennsylvania Beef Council, address topics as diverse as conservation, food safety, nutrition, recycling and grocery shopping for students in preschool through college.

"Surveys of cattle producers have shown that one of their main concerns is the education of young people," said Tammy Weaver, Industry Relations Director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council. "Just like other parents and business people, cattle producers want to see children receive a good education -- especially as it relates to beef, the beef industry and agriculture in general."

Two new checkoff-funded educational products have recently been introduced to help in that effort. The first, And the Winner is... Ground Beef, focuses on food shopping, using ground beef as an example. The sports-themed booklet teaches the fundamental principles of food safety, health, nutrition and value shopping to junior and senior high school consumer education students.

Third-and-fourth grade students are the target audience of Dig In!, the second new product. Students learn about the Food Guide Pyramid while studying the types of foods eaten by the ancient Egyptians. "Studies have shown that kids don't eat a balanced diet," said Weaver. "This package is part of an ongoing effort to emphasize the importance of eating from all the food groups."

Through Dig In!, students learn basic skills in the areas of language arts, social studies, math/ technology, science/health and fine arts. A unique, specially designed Food Guide Pyramid included in the materials features food that the Egyptians ate, including beef.

Other beef industry educational materials include posters, educational video kits, study print programs and fact sheets. For more information about educational materials available or how you can educate children in your area about the beef industry please call Tammy Weaver at the Pennsylvania Beef Council, 800-572-2020 ext. 203.

Beef Ads Continue to Sell Products

Four hundred checkoff-funded televisions commercials airing over a three week period helped the "Beef. It's What's For Dinner®" message reach millions of consumers in September. The commercials included one airing during the Miss America Pageant, which reached an estimated five million women aged 25-54, beef's target audience.

The end-of-summer campaign also included advertisements in women's and food magazines such as Better Homes and Gardens, Women's Day, Country America and the popular "Best and Worst Dressed" issue of People. The Iowa Beef Industry Council joined the ad campaign by supplementing the national ads with local radio advertisements and recipe distribution through a 1-800 line.

Magazine advertising will continue to appear in major women's magazines through next June. More than 2,000 requests for recipes in the ads and others are received from consumers each week as a result of the campaign.

Added-value programs are another key way of disseminating recipes. Because it advertises in national magazines, the beef industry earns merchandising credits that redeemed through the execution of targeted marketing programs, including further distribution of recipe brochures . Participating in these "added value" programs are such magazines as Better Homes and Gardens, Good Housekeeping, Cooking Light and Parenting.

"The beef industry moved a half-million recipe books this summer through these programs," said Roger Welder, chair of the Advertising Subcommittee for the National Cattlemen's Association. Research shows that consumers make three additional beef recipes in the eight-to-10 week period after getting a beef recipe book. Since some of the meals get added to a consumer's regular menus, more beef meals are prepared over time.

Recipes were offered by the magazines at grocery stores, schools and recreation centers and sent out through the mail. For example, 100,000 copies of "30 Meals in 30 Minutes" recipe books were distributed to families at YMCAs in June as part of the industry's added-value program with Parenting magazine.

Burger Update

New menu items continue to be introduced in the $100 billion fast food business. McDonald's has introduced their bigger 1/3 pound Arch Deluxe burgers, and have increased the weight of their "base patty" used in single hamburgers, cheeseburgers, and Big Macs by 25% to. Wendy's recently introduced a "Double Stack Burger" and Hardees Food Systems introduced the "Monster Burger" featuring two quarter-pound beef patties, three slices of cheese and eight strips of bacon in 3,400 of their stores in October. All of these sandwiches reflect the growing trend among fast food operators to emphasize value with bigger portions, rather than cutting price.

Women Targeted

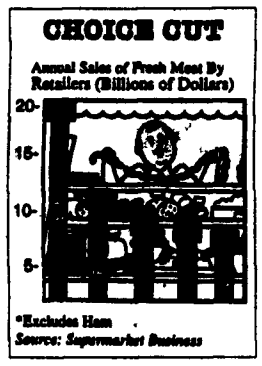
The "Beef. It's What's For Dinner" advertising program is delivering key "easy versatility" messages to more than 56 million women aged 25-54 through television, print and radio advertising. Throughout 1996-1997, 99% of Pennsylvania women (2,693,261) in the beef industry's target market will be reached with numerous beef messages: More than 1,500 television commercials and 44 magazine ads in over 20 publications will be seen by Pennsylvania consumers throughout 1997.

Beef Is A Food That Can Boost Your Mood

Beef is listed among several "foods that boost your moods." A Ladies Home Journal article by Jennifer Reid Holman says beef can help overcome low-level iron deficiencies that make some women feel tired and blue. (Adequate iron keeps the body's cells fueled with oxygen and, thus, energized.)

Most at risk for iron deficiency are women who exercise frequently, have been pregnant in the past two years or consume fewer than 2,500 calories per day.

Dr. Jan Shane, Illinois State University nutrition researcher, found that women eating 3 oz. of beef per day improved iron absorption by; almost 200%, potentially paving the way to more oxygen-rich blood. Shane was quoted as saying, "Women need to change their thinking about beef as something that is terrible for them. Beef is by far the best source of iron." Other research also has shown the values of lean beef in low-fat diets.



Beef's Share of Retail Ad Space Reaches Ten-Year High

U.S. supermarkets have advertised and promoted beef more during 1996 than at any time in the past 10 years, according to data from the National Cattlemen's Beef Association/Cattle-Fax Beef Featuring Analysis Program (BFAP). This program monitors weekly retail meat advertising activity of 134 chains across the country. The BFAP database includes over 15 years of weekly beef, pork, ham, chicken, turkey, and veal features.

Beef's share of total retail meat advertising space rose to 48.3% during the first eight months of this year--up more than four percentage points from the same time period last year, and over seven percentage points above comparable 1993 levels. Not since 1986, when beef ad space was 49.6%, has beef's share of retail meat advertising been this large.

During the past three years, beef has taken advertising space away from all of the other major meats. Comparing the first eight months of 1993 to the same time period in 1996, chicken ad space declined from 22.4% to 20.5%; pork ad space dropped from 25.2% to 22.5%; while turkey's share of meat ad space dropped from 9.2% to 6.4%. Veal remained unchanged, representing 2.2% of retail advertising space.

Youth Ag Safety Program Assists Internet Users

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Growing use of the Internet has prompted a national youth agricultural safety program to create a news column dedicated to helping students and their teachers locate safety material electronically.

The Partners for a Safer Community™ program's quarterly newsletter recently began including the "Online" department to assist readers find their way through the Internet maze. The column provides information on World Wide Web sites, offers helpful hints and discusses current electronic developments.

Two years ago, a National FFA Organization survey of its advisers indicated that nearly one quarter of the agriculture instructors had access to the Internet. National trends suggest the numbers may be much higher today.

"The Internet has become increasingly popular as an electronic library, reference and information exchange mechanism," said Julie Sessions, program director and editor of Partners for a Safer Community. "We hope to encourage the use of this tool to locate agriculture safety and health information."

As a special project of the National FFA Foundation, Inc., the Partners for a Safer Community program is a growing collaborative effort to compile and distribute youth agricultural safety education resources to teachers and community leaders across the United States.

The following "Online" excerpt comes from the summer 1996 issue of the Partners for a Safer Community newsletter. The individual World Wide Web sites can be accessed by entering the "http" address in the reference bar of the search engine included in most Internet packages.

State Ag Secretary Advises On Fuel Regs

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius advises consumers to be cautious when purchasing firewood and coal as winter approaches.

"Consumers should be aware that the amount of firewood or coal they are buying must conform to a specific measurement standard," Brosius said. "Firewood must be sold by the cord, or some fraction thereof. Deliveries of coal must be accompanied by an approved solid fuel weight slip."

A cord of firewood must equal 128 cubic feet. For example, a neatly stacked rack of firewood measuring four feet high, four feet deep, and eight feet long would measure 128 cubic feet, thus constituting a cord. One-half cord would measure 64 cubic feet.

Suppliers of firewood must provide buyers with an invoice listing the full name and address of the supplier, along with the amount paid. Small bundles of firewood sold at campgrounds or retail stores must be sold by the cubic foot. Invoices are not required for these sales.

Likewise, the person delivering coal should supply the buyer with an approved solid fuel weight slip for each load or partial load.

In the purchase of either fuel or firewood, it is best to purchase from suppliers who are known to the consumer. Retraining the receipt will help if there is a problem.

The department's Bureau of Ride and Measurement Standards is responsible for the regulation of quantity in firewood and coal sales. For more information about the sale of firewood or to register a complaint against a supplier, contact the bureau at 2310 North Cameron St., Harrisburg PA 17110-9408, (717) 787-9089.

Open Invitation To Farm Show

81st PENNSYLVANIA STATE FARM SHOW
January 11-16, 1997
Farm Show Complex
Harrisburg, Pennsylvania

Dear Friends of Agriculture:

I am pleased to extend this personal invitation to you and your family to attend the 1997 Pennsylvania State Farm Show, January 11-16 in Harrisburg. This is truly a family show, one that's enjoyable and educational for our exhibitors and visitors alike.

The Farm Show pays tribute to the fine men and women from Pennsylvania's 50,000 farms who provide essential food and fiber products to our neighbors around the world. It showcases their achievements and affords them a wonderful opportunity to share their livelihood with consumers on the other end of the food chain. The Farm Show allows farmers, producers and agribusiness to see what advancements the industry has made each year and to plan for their future.

Thousands of beef cattle, dairy cattle, sheep, swine, horses, goats, rabbits and poultry are in the limelight of competition and sales throughout Farm Show week. Three hundred commercial exhibitors feature their newest innovations in farm equipment, services and products. Daily entertainment is featured in the large and small arenas, with rodeos, horse and pony pulling contest, draft horse hitched competition, a folk dance festival, and a sheep to shawl contest. A variety of informative demonstrations are held throughout the week in the Family Corner.

Good food has long been a part of the Farm Show tradition and we now have 11 associations in the Food Court, serving up tons of delicious food all week long. You can buy processed food products from a variety of companies in the Pennsylvania Food Market. Cooking demonstrations take place all week in the Food Pantry, using many of the wonderful foods produced or processed here in the Keystone State.

The Farm Show offers the opportunity to recognize and reward the hard work and creativity of our farm families, and to highlight the advances in technology which make our farmers and business the most productive in the world. Please make plans to join us during Farm Show Week.

Truly yours,
Charles C. Broslus
Secretary of Agriculture

Bulletin Provides Forage Preservation Info

EBENSBURG (Cambria Co.) — Forage crops — legumes, grasses, and corn silage — form the basis of the nutritional programs on dairy, beef, and sheep farms. From the moment that crops are cut until they are delivered to animals, biological processes take place that decrease their quantity and nutritional quality as feeds. Silage and Hay Preservation, NRAES-5, provides a wealth of practical information and scientific backgrounds on management forage preservation to reduce losses and quality changes. Proper management results in more efficient production and greater farm profits.

The 53-page bulletin in divided into three sections: The Biology of Silage Preservation, Preservation of Hay, and Additives for Silage and Hay Preservation. In the first two sections, the processes that affect forage quality are described, and management practices to control these processes are discussed. The additives section described their impact on forage preservation and includes a frank assessment of the usefulness of eight categories of additives.

Silage and Hay Preservation, NRAES-5, was written by R.E. Pitts, a professor of agricultural and biological engineering at Cornell University.

Silage and Hay Preservation, NRAES-5, is available for $8 from the Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service (NRAES), Cooperative Extension Publications Distribution Center, Penn State University, 112 Agriculture Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802-2602. Deere Announces Round Balers

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere has introduced a new family of round balers designed to meet the needs of any haying operation — from the smallest owner-operator to custom balers to the largest commercial hay producers.

Called the 6 Series, these seven models also continue John Deere's leadership in reliability, bale quality, and the capacity to make quick work of big fields.

The new model lineup, from smallest to largest, includes the John Deere 446, 546, 456, 456 Silage Special, 556, 466, and 566 models. Bale sizes range from the 446's 4-foot-wide by 4-foot-tall bale, weighing up to 750 pounds, to the 5x6-foot bale, weighing up to 2,200 pounds, from the 566.

A new size in the round baler family is the model 556, which produces a 5x5-foot bale, weighing up to 1,450 pounds.

All 6 Series Balers are available with either the standard pickup or the new, optional heavy-duty Mega Tooth pickup. Both pickups share a common frame. However, the Mega Tooth unit is especially well-suited to handle difficult crop conditions. Just as its name implies, the Mega Tooth pickup features larger-diameter, stronger pickup teeth, a reinforced toothbar, twin reel cams, and larger reel shaft and reel bearings.

A wide pickup, measuring 71 inches, is available as an option on the 446, 456, 456 Silage Special, and 466 Round Balers. The extra width helps pull in windblown or scattered material. Also, two converging augers move the crop toward the center of the pickup.

The John Deere 6-Series Round Balers include the model 446, 546, 456, 456 Silage Special, 556, 466, and 566. Bale sizes range from the 446's 4-foot-wide by 4-foot-tall bale, weighing up to 750 pounds, to the 566's 5-foot by 6-foot bale, weighing up to 2,200 pounds.

The key to round baling productivity is to keep the operator in the tractor seat. That's why, for the 446, 546, 456, and 556 Round Balers, the extra-service-life rectangular-wire belt splices have been redesigned for up to 15 percent more holding power at the splices than before. An improved hook shape enhances the integrity of the splice as the belt flexes in the baler. On the 456 Silage Special, 466, 566 models, a new plate-type fastener provides 40 percent more pullout resistance than the 5 Series' wire-type fasteners.

To get a grip on the bale and keep it, John Deere'e exclusive 7-inch-wide, diamond-tread belts are staggered to reduce the loss of fine material, and are closely spaced to contain the hay for fast, easy bale starts. Constructed of three-ply combination nylon/polyester, the belts have the strength to handle heavy shock loads, and maintain consistent length throughout their life.

Another addition to the model lineup is the 456 Silage Special Baler. This baler is capable of making 4x5-foot bales, weighing as much as 1,750 pounds. It can handle crops with moisture levels up to 60 or 70 percent.

Bale uniformity is another measure of high-productivity round baling. The new John Deere 6 Series offers a wide range of electronic monitors and mechanical indicators to keep the operator informed of machine and bale status.

For in-cab monitors, the 456, 456 Silage Special, and 556 Balers come with the new BaleWatch two-gauge monitor. Two dial indicators display bale forming shape, while an audible alarm sounds for near-full bale size, and goes silent at full bale. The alarm sounds continuously if an oversize condition is reached. The BaleWatch monitor allows the operator to monitor important baler functions without looking back, reducing operator fatigue, which increases overall productivity.

Systems Offer GPS Compatibility

WHEATON, Ill. — New TeeJet® technology allows precision-farming operators to better manage their chemical dollars.

TeeJet electronic controls are now fully compatible with popular GPS hardware and software products to provide for variable-rate applications and detailed application records.

"TeeJet application systems are designed with precision farming in mind," said Richard Gould, director of the application systems group for Spraying Systems Co., manufacturer of TeeJet spray products. "Combined with other crop input and yield data, TeeJet systems will help you better control valuable crop inputs such as chemicals and liquid fertilizers."

By utilizing a total systems approach to spraying, from toggle to tip, TeeJet application systems are designed to enhance today's precision farming operations.

Available as a pressure or flow-based system, the TeeJet 844 is very simple to program and operate. A color-coded control panel provides fast and easy spray tip selection, while a large, single read-out screen constantly displays application rate, pressure, speed, area covered and total volume applied.

The TeeJet 855 continuously monitors pressure and flow to ensure maximum reliability. Four rate presets, built-in sensor monitors, and diagnostic tools, combined with detailed application information, make the 855 an extremely flexible application control.

Grower Satisfaction High

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Even before harvest began, grower satisfaction with Roundup Ready soybeans was extremely high, according to a survey of growers who planted Roundup Ready soybeans in 1996.

Ninety-seven percent of the 1,000-plus farmers surveyed said they were satisfied with their Roundup Ready soybeans, with 71 percent indicating they were "very satisfied." Most growers indicating they were less than "very satisfied" said it was because they hadn't seen their yields yet.

Seventy-seven percent of the growers, who were surveyed in August said Roundup Ready soybeans represented better than average value. Thirty percent rated the value as "very good." Only two percent said the soybeans were not a good value. Many growers said they ranked the value of Roundup Ready soybeans as "good" rather than "very good" only because they couldn't assess yield yet when the survey questions were asked.

"We're very pleased that growers had the opportunity to demonstrate for themselves this year what a good value Roundup Ready soybeans are," said Doug Dorsey, Roundup Ready soybean manager for Monsanto. "Growers in the survey said Roundup Ready soybeans gave them more weed control for the money.

"They offered many reasons for their satisfaction with the technology," Dorsey said, "but excellent weed control and outstanding crop safety topped the list. Growers like the wide window of application and broad-spectrum control of grasses and broadleaf weeds."

While 42 percent of the growers said Roundup Ready soybeans met their expectations, 45 percent said the soybeans exceeded expectations. Of that 45 percent, over half said their expectations were "very much" exceeded.

Eighty-five percent of the growers said they intend to plant Roundup Ready soybeans in 1997. Only 2 percent said they won't plant the beans next year; the others have not yet made their planting decision. Most of the undecided growers indicated that they wanted to see their 1996 yields before making their planting decision for 1997.

FMC, Dupont Agree To Share Key Compounds

PHILADELPHIA — FMC Corporation and DuPont Agricultural products have expanded their supply agreement for the commercialization of soybean herbicides in the United States. The revised agreement gives both parties the opportunity to better meet their customers' needs for weed control in soybeans.

In March 1996, FMC and DuPont announced an agreement that enabled the two companies to combine proprietary active ingredients — sulfentrazone (FMC) and chlorimuron-ethyl (DuPont) — and to independently market new products formulated from these active ingredients.

Under the new agreement, FMC will be adding two new postemergence soybean herbicides, based on DuPont chemistry to its preemergence Authority® and Command® product line for the 1997 crop season, continuing its strategic push into the herbicide market.

Matador™ is the brand name for a postemergence grass herbicide based on quizalofop and Skirmish™ is a postemergence broadleaf herbicide based on chlorimuron-ethyl.

"We are excited about the strong soybean herbicide portfolio that FMC sales representatives will be offering," said Nick Phillips, FMC venture manager for sulfentrazone. "FMC will now sell its own branded postemergence products for soybean weed control in 1997, alongside the preemergence herbicides Command 3ME and Authority Broadleaf. This completes the soybean herbicide portfolio, allowing FMC to offer growers a range of solutions for grass and broadleaf weed management in soybeans, in any tillage system."

Registration of sulfentrazone is anticipated from the Environmental Protection Agency in early 1997. FMC and DuPont are prepared to bring their respective products to market in time for use in the 1997 growing season.

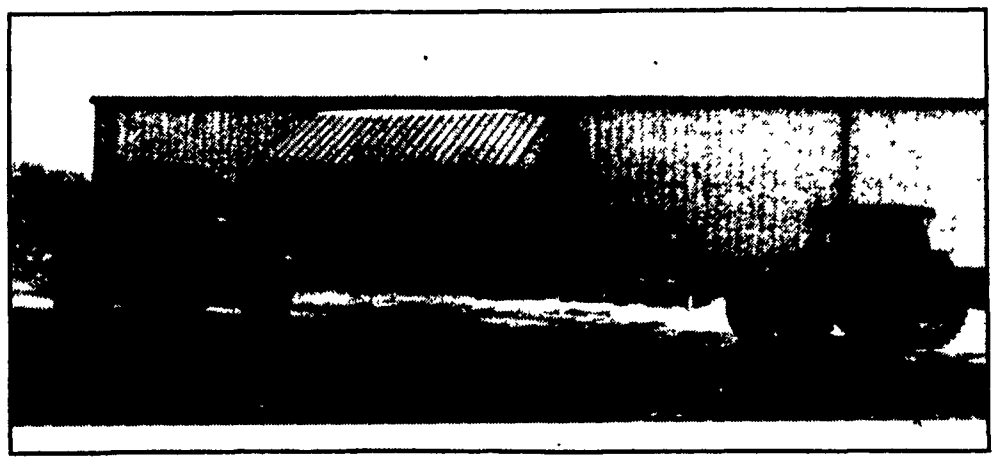
Eugene and Dan Eckroth continue a history of serving Case IH customers in three locations that started in 1947 when their grandfather started the business at New Ringgold. The brothers grew the business since they took over in 1983 to the point where they now have two additional locations, a store in Bloomsburg, and a brand new facility situated on five acres at Orefield.

"We feel strongly that we want to treat people like we want to be treated," Dan said. "We take time to listen to their needs and help them where we can. No high pressure, just the help they want."

The dealerships ship parts and do on-farm service work where needed in their areas. They are a full-line dealer that includes: combines, tractors, skid loaders, and tillage and planting equipment. They believe their new 17,500 square foot building to house service, parts, sales and warehouse departments and a show room, proves commitment to the future of the farm community.

Past customers are appreciated and the Eckroth brothers look forward to serving many old and new customers in the future.



A new facility at Orefield located along Kernsville Road gives the Eckroth dealerships 17,500 square feet of space to expand business and serve their customers better.

Direct Marketing Conference Set For Feb. 5-8

NEWARK, Del. — Opportunities for networking abound at the 15th Annual Delaware/Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference and Trade Show, Feb. 5-8, at the Sheraton Inn in Dover, Del.

Based on the theme "Connections," the event will help farm retail market operators stay on top of issues and opportunities in the business of marketing fresh, quality products, floral items, and other products.

"The event has been designed to give the participant an edge for the future," said Carl German, cooperative extension crops marketing specialist at the University of Delaware and an organizer of the conference. "Sessions will cover many aspects of direct marketing, including maintaining produce quality, marketing organic produce, and establishing electronic connections with the local and international community."

Wednesday, Feb. 5, is devoted to a preconference workshop that will include ideas on products, technology, and marketing techniques.

The conference begins officially on Thursday, Feb. 6, with an international perspective from Roy Dart of Wolverhampton, England. Exhibits and breakout sessions on electronic marketing, food and farm festivals, and maintaining community connections will round out the day.

Friday's breakout sessions will focus on meeting customer needs, including mail-order and restaurant customers, and connecting with organic markets. The day will conclude with presentations on direct market operations in North Carolina and Delaware and a banquet. Saturday will feature tours of local agricultural businesses.

The conference and trade show are sponsored by cooperative extension of Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Virginia in cooperation with the Farm Foundation, Delaware Direct Marketing Association, Maryland Direct Farm Market Association, New Jersey Farmers' Direct Marketing Association, Pennsylvania Farm Markets Association, and the departments of agriculture in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Virginia.

Early registration is advised because space is limited. For a complete brochure or more information on the conference and preconference workshop, contact Carl German at (302) 831-1317, via e-mail at clgerman@brahms.udel.edu, or at 230 Townsend Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19717-1303.

First In Product Innovation

Opti-Flo (Milk transfer System)
This control allows the milk pump to deliver a steady, gentle flow of milk to the plate cooler to achieve more efficient cooling Since milk goes through the plate cooler at a slower pace, the water has a better chance to take the heat out of the milk, and increase the quality of the milk.

Agri-Comp Computer
The Agri-comp 2045 Herd Management Computer and software are state-of-the-art innovation at its finest. The totally integrated package with direct link-ups to detachers with milk meters and to feed stations updates cow data instantly in three vital areas: 1) milk production; 2) feeding and 3) breeding.

Air-Star Vacuum Pump
Save Money – The Air-Star vacuum pump does not consume oil like a conventional oil vane vacuum pump, saving the cost of pump oil.
High Performance – The Air-Star vacuum pump creates stable vacuum with low power consumption. Air-Star vacuum pumps are available in sizes from 5 HP to 25 HP

Flo-Star Claws
Its unique design helps maintain healthy udders by protecting against cross-contamination while promoting faster, gentler milking and improved milk quality.
No other milking claw can match the outstanding performance of Flo-Star.

Dari-Kool Milk Cooler
Dari-Kool milk coolers, larger than 800 gallons, are constructed with two or more independent, full-flow cooling plates this fail-safe design distributes the cooling load efficiency and equally between compressors. Should one compressor fail, milk will be cooled by the other independent system, thereby avoiding the loss of a tank of milk

Dari-Kool Plate Cooler
The Dari-Kool Plate Cooler reduces risk of downgraded milk and income loss, because quick cooling ensures you ship quality milk. It cuts bulk milk cooler run time, reducing wear and tear on the compressor It fits any existing system it's compact, economical, and adapts to your needs

Is Business Growth Avoidable On The Dairy Farm?

C. WILLIAM HEALD
Penn State University
Dairy, Animal Science

In most businesses growth is very desirable and welcomed by the stock market. But in dairy its discussion is very hotly contested in public forums.

One of the first rules of good business is to face reality.

The reality for dairy producers is harsh after enjoying government supports for many decades.

To some producers price supports became entitlements. Entitlements have come under attack with the current call for budget reductions voiced in recent elections.

Dairy supports prices are nearing an end and most are gone.

Nearly 91 percent of our population want wholesome cheap food. The minority that want higher food prices are producers of that wholesome food.

The majority of voters are distracted by concerns about urban problems such as violence, drugs, homeless, gangs, infrastructure, education, welfare, election reform, and lowering entitlement payments.

As a result legislators are focused on urban problems not rural problems.

Agriculture has too few rural legislators to make much difference when money issues regarding agriculture come to the floor.

Can we really expect legislators to vote in favor of money for agriculture when placed in office by a majority of voters with little or no interest in food issues other than safety?

Should we bet the farm hoping legislators that come from the city will vote tax dollars for agriculture?

I don't think many in the know can be found that believe recent trends will be reversed.

Next, let's consider some underlining principles of our fellow Americans.

U.S. citizens have two strong but conflicting principles that they ascribe to passionately. They have fought wars over these issues.

These conflicting principles deal with government and business.

The first principle is democracy.

Democracy means one person one vote (equality under the law where farmers now get out voted on most issues).

The financial principle is capitalism.

Capitalism is survival of the fittest.

These principles are at odds with each other but we hold them deep in our ethical fabrice of U.S. citizenship.

To complicate matters, individuals apply cultural and religious teachings to modify these fundamental principles. This sets the stage for controversy depending on which principle one apply, democracy or capitalism and the individual's background.

Successful business people, with the emphasis on the word business, learn how to balance these opposing principles.

Put in simplistic terms, dairy farmers need to decide the lifestyle they want for their family.

Next, they need to determine the income it will take to support that lifestyle.

Once the income is determined then a business plan can be developed based on realities of the market.

A business owner should know their cost of production and their market price. Easier said than done some say. Again, one must apply business realism.

Most farmers have something close to a cost of production each year in the income tax report if they don't have more complete financial records.

On the other side of the equation milk prices have jumped to record highs and are falling back. It is expected that these fluctuations will continue in the future but the average since the early '80s has not been far from $12/cwt.

Plan on less than this and bank the difference for retirement.

After doing this calculation many farms find that they are financially short of their lifestyle goal.

At least four alternatives can be considered.

Lower production costs, raise pounds of milk sold, supplement farm income with off-farm income, or find other employment before the current equity is lost.

Also, one should consider a combination of these options. Future dairy extension programs will be addressing these alternatives.

The Dairy-MAP programs, especially the new program being pilot tested this winter called Focus on the Future and the four new dairy extension initiatives will address these options this winter. Check with your local extension office.

If the business planning approach described above is used, the financial health of individual farms is no longer a question of governmental action or inaction and betting the farm on what agriculture wishes the government to do. It becomes a lifestyle decision over which producers have more control.

It is not a question of growth but a business decision to change. I find dairy producers in every region of Pennsylvania that say "Life is better now" once they make the business plan to change their operations and work to make it reality.

Other comments I have heard recently are, "I have three boys that want to go to college. I need to add cows to generate the money for tuition and later my retirement."

Another farmer said, "I sited the barn so I can add as many cows as necessary to provide the income my family needs. I don't want to milk more cows but the family comes first."

I suspect that when lifestyle on these farms is nearer to that of urban friends and classmates, more children will look at the farm as a business to return to and more farms/businesses will stay in these families.

Farming can still be fun and a great place to rear a family with appropriate farm business planning. A great future for dairy farming in Pennsylvania can be had by those who take a business approach to farming.

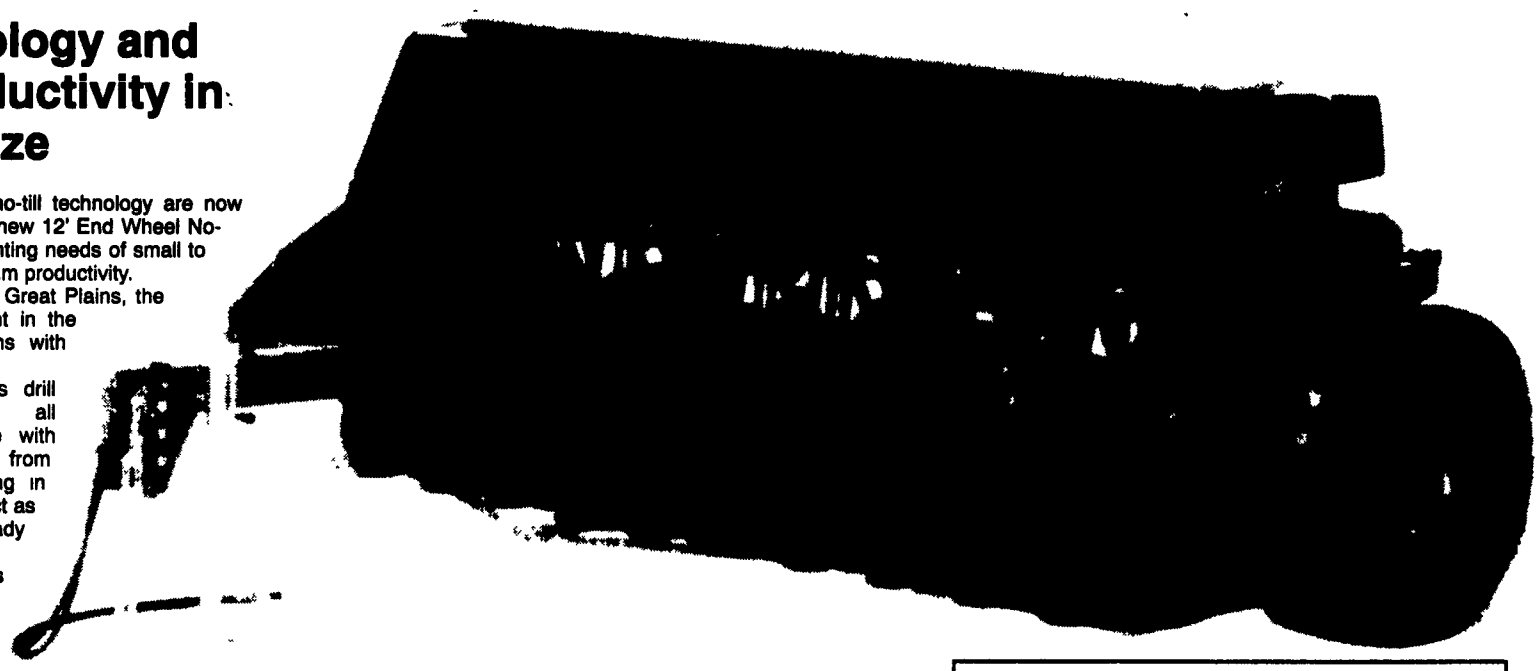
New from – Great Plains

12' End Wheel No-Till Drill

No-Till technology and maximum productivity in a 12' size



All of the benefits of Great Plains no-till technology are now available in a new 12 foot size. The new 12' End Wheel No-Till drill is designed to handle the planting needs of small to medium sized operations with maximum productivity.
Built to the high quality standards of Great Plains, the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill will plant in the most demanding of no-till conditions with extreme accuracy.
The end wheel design makes this drill extremely maneuverable. Keeping all ground-working com-ponents in-line with the end wheels prevents openers from bulldozing or bridging when working in rolling terrain. The end wheels also act as stabilizers to hold the openers steady when seeding on slopes.
Excess debris is no problem for this unit. Opener and coulter stagger of 10 3/4" allows trash to flow evenly and freely. No-till coulters create a mini-seedbed allowing openers to concentrate on seed placement.
Planting depth adjustments are quick and easy with the "T"-handle depth control system. State of the art solid seed tubes ensure that the seed exits the chute with "zero motion drop" for ultimate seed placement accuracy. The optional Seed-Lok™ wheel then presses each seed into moist soil for optimum germination.
The improved straight-arm, solid stand opener design, combined with the cushioned press wheel provides maximum down pressure with less wear and tear.

The large, welded seed box holds up to 2.4 bushels per foot. Exclusive Great Plains fluted feed seed cups coupled with the 4-speed gearbox deliver outstanding accuracy in varying rates and seeding conditions.
Designed with safety in mind, the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill comes equipped with transport safety lights and a wider walkboard.
Accessories available with the 12' End Wheel No-Till drill include: folding markers, coil tine harrows, seed box agitator and small seeds attachment.

Walkers Ready For Farm Show

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

THOMASVILLE (York Co.) — The show box has been cleaned out and restocked. Their Walk-Le farm sign is ready to hang.

Feet are trimmed and some rough clipping done on their four Farm Show-bound Holsteins.

Probably, a few extra clothes and snacks will be packed along with all the other supplies this year — just in case it snows.

While Farm Show officials hope the weatherman forecasts a run of pleasant January weather, Michelle Walker, 14, figures she would not be upset if a repeat of last year's blizzard hit. She and her brother Brad, 20, were snowed in at the 1996 Farm Show, while their brother Greg, 18, and parents Brenda and Leroy battled to finish the chores and make it to the Holstein show after some two feet of drifting snow blanketed the region.

"It was fun," says Michelle, of the howling blizzard that marooned exhibitors inside the complex and kept would-be crowds snowed-in at home. "There were only a few people that came and it was like a big party among farmers that were there exhibiting animals."

"We piled everything in the stalls and Grandpa took the trailer home so he wouldn't have to shovel it out later," she recalls of the rush to exit the parking lot before the flakes began piling up.

Even being picked up, by friends, while in her sleeping bag and being dumped out into a snowdrift did not dampen the York County 4-H dairy exhibitor's enthusiasm to return this year and chance another round of the exceptionally bad weather that plagued the Farm Show's 1996 run.

The Walker family first showed at the Farm Show in the mid-1980s, when their children began raising 4-H project animals.

Leroy grew up on the Glen Rock dairy farm of his parents, Hazel and Norman Walker, and worked for several years in the area as a dairy herdsman. He and Brenda started their own milking herd in 1990 on a rented farm near New Freedom, then purchased their farm at Thomasville in 1994.

Exhibiting at the Farm Show has been a favorite family activity since entering their first heifer about 10 years ago. In fact, when the Walkers discussed a possible January visit to Disney World some time ago, Brad opposed the timing because it meant missing the Harrisburg event.

Four head are entered in the Walk-Le show string for this year's exhibit: Michelle's yearling, Greg's yearling and aged cow, and Brad's 5-year-old in the open class show.

Absent from the lineup after many years, however, will be Brad's junior show reserve grand champion from last year, Warns Sexy Lady.

Lady, an EX-2E-91 Sexation daughter and the undisputed "queen" of the Walker's herd until she was lost a month ago, freshened early in December with a bull calf, then died very unexpectedly from internal bleeding.

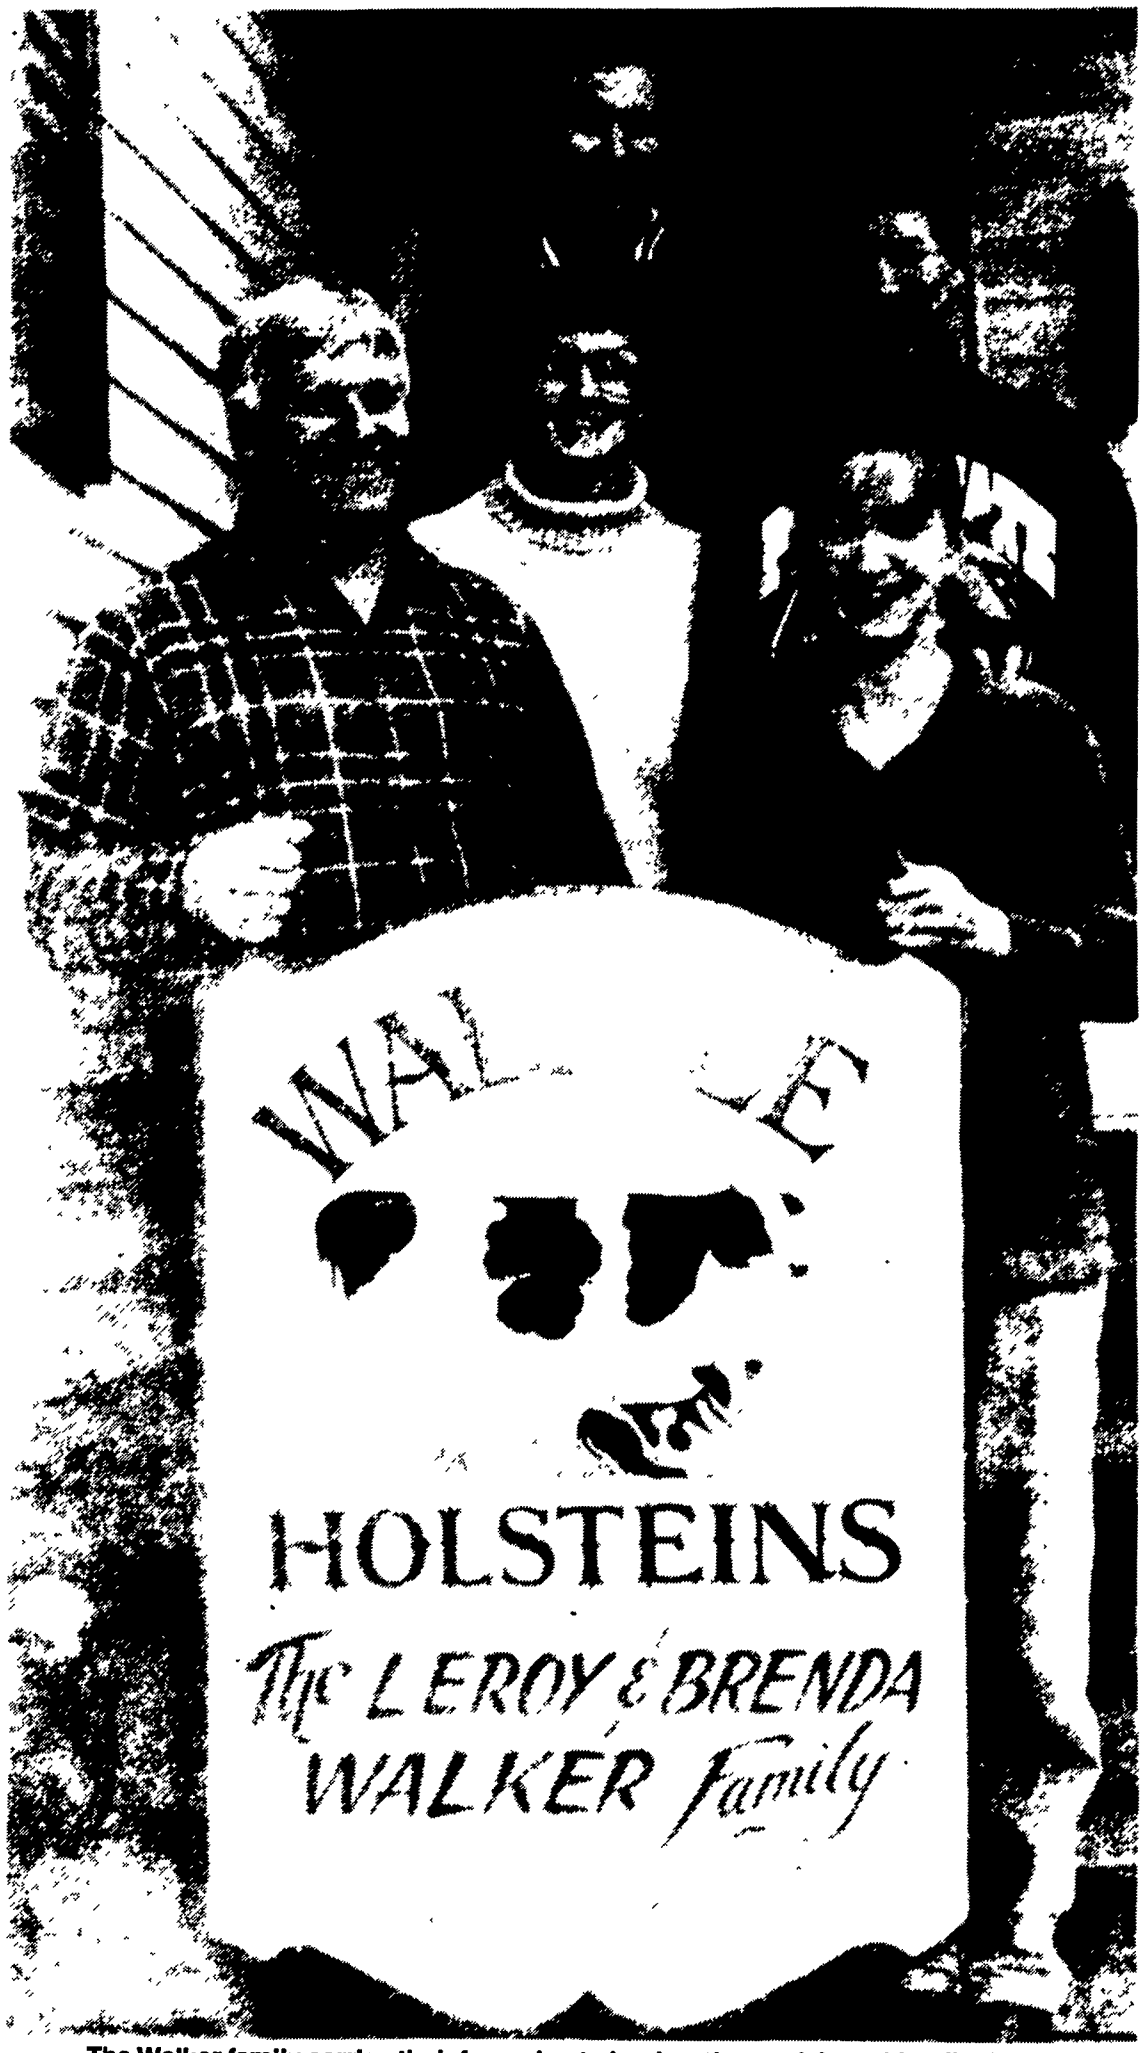
Efforts were made to salvage 13 eggs from her reproductive system, but none were found to be transferrable. She had been named supreme at the York Fair's junior show in 1993 and 1994, took first in the junior division of her class at the Holstein Association's 1996 spring and fall championship shows, was fourth in the junior division at the September Harrisburg All-American.

However, the family's pride and pet will be recognized posthumously, having just been named the Junior All-Pennsylvania winner in the 100,000-pound category by the state Holstein Association.

In four lacations, Lady made more than 125,000 pounds lifetime, including her last 391-day lactation of 39,000 pounds of milk.

Brad does have one heifer from Lady, an August-born embryo-transfer calf. He also plans to raise her two bull calves, the December-born natural calf and one August-born ET.

Brenda purchased for Leroy his first registered calf as a Christmas present about 10 years ago. Descendants of that calf are still part of the Walker's 105-head registered Holstein herd, which recently topped the York County DHIA production list for 1996.



The Walker family carries their farm sign to load on the truck in making final preparations for exhibiting at the Farm Show. In front are Leroy and Michelle, Brenda and Greg behind and Brad at the top of the steps.

Cleaning out and checking the necessities in the showbox is a must-do before the Walkers head for the Farm Show building in Harrisburg. Brad, Michelle and Greg take inventory of what they need to add to their supplies.

In October 1995, the Walkers switched to a 3X milking schedule, increasing their rolling herd average over 5,000 pounds and gaining an average production boost of 10 pounds per cow. Their November 1996 RHA was 25,440 milk, 924 fat and 815 protein.

The Walk-Le herd now averages about 80 pounds of milk per head per day, on a carefully-balanced TMR ration geared to a split grouping, one for top producers and one for heifers. Both feeding and health programs are monitored closely with the assistance of nutrition and veterinary consultants.

"Quality of forage and cow comfort," are two factors that Leroy pinpoints as key to their increased production.

Putting up quality forage this year was a challenge, with the season's prolonged periods of moisture, and feedstuffs are tested frequently.

Pillow mattresses in the free stalls, increased ventilation in the barn and lining the feed bunk with a smooth, non-concrete surface have all enhanced overall cow health, comfort and feed intake.

Since his graduation from Susquehannock High School in June 1995, Brad is full-time herdsman. He milks the 3 and 11 p.m. shifts in the double-five parlor, handles freshenings and dryoffs, and selects the matings, while Leroy does the A.I. work in the herd. Brenda does the 7 a.m. milking, and Leroy fills in when needed on any shift.

Greg, a junior at York Vo-Tech studying welding, is kept busy as the farm's machinery and equipment "fix-er," as well as being responsible for evening and weekend feeding chores. He was recently recognized by his 4-H leaders for his activities in the program this season.

Michelle is an eighth-grade student at Spring Grove Middle School. She raises calves and waters the heifers, helps to switch

New Bolton Researcher Explains Use Of MUN

JAMES D. FERGUSON
Associate Professor
New Bolton Center

Concentrations of urea in milk are variable from herd to herd and from cow to cow in the same herd.

Across all cows in Pennsylvania we could expect to find a wide variation in MUN (milk urea nitrogen) concentrations. This is the case for samples run in the Pa. DHIA testing laboratory.

Since Sept. 25, 1995, through Sept. 30, 1996, a total of 566,764 samples have been analyzed for urea concentration by the Pa. DHIA laboratory. Across all cows, mean urea nitrogen was 14.3 mg/dl with a range of .5 to 39.5 mg/dl and a standard deviation of 4.2.

There was no different in mean MUN by lacatation number.

To look at production effects, MUN was examined by dividing herds into quartiles of milk production (RHA) within breed.

What Should Values Be?

The variation in milk urea concentrations between herds and between cows indicates wide variations in protein, energy and water intake.

Rations should be appropriately balanced for rumen digestion and absorption of needed nutrients for maintenance of both body tissue and production of milk. When rations are well formulated, they contain acceptable rations of rumen degradable and undegradable protein, rumen fermentable carbohydrate, and post-ruminal absorption of energy metabolites.

Given typical ranges of dry matter intake and production for a herd consuming a diet that is blended for a certain level of milk production, the mean MUN should be within a predictable range. If the MUN was outside this range, it would suggest problems with a feeding program.

It could not be used to identify a specific problem.

However, looking at urea concentration in milk may provide an opportunity to address problems with the feeding program on a farm.

Important questions are: What should milk urea concentrations be? What should the herd average be? What should cows average at different production levels?

Just as somatic cell counts are only interpretable within the framework of a goal, milk urea concentrations are only interpretable in relation to goals acceptable by the dairy producer and his/her advisors.

Deviation from an acceptable range suggests that there are factors within the feeding program that need to be examined.

If mean MUN is outside an acceptable range, changing MUN concentrations may not be made without some functional change in the forage program on the farm.

Urea values should not be interpreted alone.

That is, they should not be interpreted without also examining the entire feeding program on the farm, including ration formulation, ration delivery, mixing of feeds, feed intake, and water intake.

Given these provisions, what should urea values be?

MUN values in cows fed at optimal dry matter intake typically fall in the range of 10 to 14 mg/dl. The range of MUN concentration for individual cows consuming the same diet is +6 or -6 from the mean of the group. That is, if a group of cows averaged 12 MUN mg/dl, 95% of the group would fall between the values of 6 to 18 mg/dl MUN.

How many cows should I sample?

Given the variation of milk urea, at least eight cows should be tested within a group to have interpretable results. Testing fewer than eight cows will not result in a meaningful average value of milk urea and cannot be interpreted. In addition, the cows to be tested should be cows that have free access to feed and are healthy.

If mean values of milk urea should be 10 to 14 mg/dl, why is my herd at 16 mg/dl and should I be concerned about it?

The fact that a mean milk urea nitrogen concentration of 16 mg/dl is found means there is some inefficiency in protein feeding. High MUN suggests that more protein is being fed than is necessary for production for that group, or that feed intake is not as uniform as desired for the group.

If diets contain high amounts of rumen degradable protein, such as high alfalfa diets, MUN may be "high."

Alfalfa haylage or hay provides a high concentration of rumen degradable nitrogen which may not be captured as microbial protein given constraints on the rumen fermentable carbohydrate included in the ration. In this situation, MUN may be higher than ideal.

If the milk urea levels are 16 mg/dl, should I try to reduce them?

The higher levels of MUN concentration suggets that there are opportunities to improve the protein feeding system. You need to determine what factors may be contributing to the elevated milk urea and examine management options which may balance the nitrogen supply in the rations. These may also be opportunities to reduce ration costs and improve efficiency of feed delivery.

Experiences With MUN

At our dairy at the University of Pennsylvania we have examined blood urea, milk urea through the DHIA test, and milk urea from a.m. samples and p.m. samples using our clinical laboratory, from 295 samples.

The table contains the mean values for blood, milk urea a.m., milk urea p.m. and DHIA milk urea for 295 samples from 37 cows samples repetitively from December through August. Cows are fed a total mixed ration at 11 a.m.

One group is fed a high production ration balanced for 90 lbs. of milk and a low production group ration is balanced for 55 lbs. of milk. Milking occurs twice a day at 5 a.m. to 7 a.m. and 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Blood samples were collected around 2 p.m. The average fat test was 3.6% and protein 3.3%.

The DHIA MUN concentration represents a composite sample taken from morning and evening

Don't Neglect Chloride In Nutrient Management Of Wheat

NORCROSS, Ga. — Neglecting any of the controllable factors of production can be costly, especially when crop prices are good. Chloride is a plant nutrient that is frequently found in insufficient levels in wheat producing areas of the Great Plains and is often neglected in nutrient management. In most of the Great Plains, nitrogen and phosphorus are the only nutrients that are more likely to be insufficient.

Several symptoms of insufficient chloride in small grains have been identified by research conducted over the last 10 years. They include:

- Increased incidence of foliar diseases such as rust, septoria, and tanspot
- Slower than normal reproductive crop development
- Premature death of the leaves
- Non-disease leaf spotting on some varieties
- Increased late-season lodging
- Reduced kernel weight and test weight

Chloride fertilization increases grain yield and grain quality. Besides increased tissue chloride, increased kernel weight and test weight are the most frequently observed effects of chloride fertilization. Test weight increases of 2 to 4 pounds per bushel are not uncommon. A recent research summary of over 200 evaluations of wheat and barley fertilization with chloride showed response 48 percent of the time and an average response of 5.2 bushels per acre. Wheat responses have been as high as 18 to 20 bushels per acre for individual varieties and sites. These were exceptional cases, but they illustrate the response potential for this nutrient that just a few years ago was ignored completely in crop management.

Chloride fertilization should be considered in nutrient management plans for wheat. Muriate of potash (0-0-60 or 0-0-62) is potassium chloride and is the most common fertilizer source of chloride. Potash contains 47 percent chloride. Thus, an application of 100 pounds of material gives 47 pounds of chloride. Magnesium chloride is a liquid source containing 22.5 percent chloride that is compatible with nitrogen solutions. Considerable placement flexibility exists, with broadcast, band, and early topdressing giving equal response in most cases. However, excess water will move chloride from the root zone, making time of application more important under conditions of high leaching potential. Recommended rates vary by state and province but are generally designed to bring the sum of soil chloride and applied chloride to a total of 30 to 60 pounds per acre.

"Leave nothing to chance" is a production philosophy shared by many successful producers. Neglecting chloride in nutrient management of wheat leaves the supply of this important nutrient to chance. The result may be reduced yield, lower grain quality, and decreased profitability.

Years Of Successful Poultry Breeding For Roland Romig

CAROLYN MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

SAYRE (Bradford County) — Hanging on a living room wall is one of Roland Romig's most prized possessions — an intricate wood inlaid picture of Noah gathering several different breeds of birds into the ark.

The picture is valued not just because of its beauty, but it speaks to Roland about two of his lifelong pursuits: being a servant of God, and of caring for and breeding many different breeds and varieties of poultry.

Roland comes by his love of poultry honestly. His father, Arthur Romig, was a well-known breeder who showed throughout the United States.

"My dad was in the exhibition of poultry from before the time I was born, and he showed at the old famous shows of Boston and Madison Square Garden and some other shows," Romig said.

"He'd always send the poultry away with a price on them, and if somebody bought them they just didn't send them back. They always, in those days, sent them by railway express. Very seldom did they ever come back. He had such quality birds."

However, in the early 1950s, when diseases became more prevalent, Arthur Romig stopped exhibiting the birds and started concentrating on breeding.

Roland was only 18 years old when his father died, but he carried on the poultry tradition by working for the Turner family in nearby Horseheads, N.Y.

The Turners, at Pleasant View Farms, not only bred poultry but also exhibited at many fairs and shows.

"Because I came in (to the job) knowing poultry, they gave me a lot of the responsibilities of the exhibition of poultry," Romig said.

"I knew where all the breeders were in the East, and so, any bird that we did not have, come fair time, I would go make several trips around the countryside to find the birds we needed."

In 1964 Romig began his other career, that of a Baptist minister, by attending seminary.

"For a few years I didn't have poultry, but most every place I ended up pastoring, after I started pastoring, I've had poultry."

He often got the whole family involved, including his wife, Beverly, who grew up on a farm, and their five children: Arthur, who is now the superintendent of the Chemung County N.Y. Fair poultry show; Audrey, Brenda, David and Joy.

When his ministry brought him back to Elmira 12 years ago, Romig decided to expand his poultry flock. Because he lived in Pennsylvania, he was able to show at the Pennsylvania Farm Show as well as many other state and county fairs.

"My sons were bigger and they had some interest in the showing, and we started traveling to the fairs and had a string similar to what the Turners did in years past," Romig explained.

"About the time I started showing poultry again, I joined the American Poultry Association and had points started to build toward the master exhibitor (honor)."

Points are accumulated through having champion and high-placing poultry at all the shows. Although achieving master exhibitor status wasn't first on his mind, Romig was honored to receive his master exhibitor award in 1991.

"My number is '185' and no one else will ever have that number," Romig said with a satisfied chuckle. "I'm number 185 Master Exhibitor."

Just over one year ago, however, Romig moved to Sayre where he was unable to keep poultry on his property.

"I had a public sale," Romig explained. "I had the largest sale of exhibition poultry except maybe one other in the last 30 to 40 years. I had nearly 3,000 head that I sold."

That was in December 1995. However, in January 1996 Romig did exhibit the poultry of which he retained ownership in partnership with other people.

Now his birds are scattered throughout Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and Ohio, and Ontario, Canada. In total, he has about 100 birds.

(Turn to Page G30)

FSA Official Warns Producers Of New Market Risks

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. — As this year and this century comes to a close, agriculture truly is entering a new era, Farm Service Agency Associate Administrator Randy Weber said at the National Farmers National Convention here recently.

"Programs and policies have been with us for decades and are changing, and the role of government in agriculture is changing," Weber said. "But there is one constant. It also remains the government's responsibility to assure a healthy, strong farm economy, and to work with the producers who make it possible.

"1996, I believe, will go down in the books as a watershed year for agriculture," Weber said.

The new farm bill will subject farmers to the discipline of open and sometimes volatile markets, such as those markets seen in the 1996 grain and dairy commodities, Weber explained.

Today's farm policies are bringing producers throughout the nation choices and new opportunities, but Weber cautioned that more than ever, farmers will face new risks.

Futhermore, Weber expressed concern about the North American Free Trade Agreement and its impact on American independent farm operators. "We were very disappointed in the NAFTA panel's report supporting high Canadian tariffs on U.S. exports of dairy, poultry and other products," he said. He said USDA would work to improve U.S. access to Canadian markets, including work with the World Trade Organization.

National Farmers leaders agree with Weber. "The United States government needs to work proactively to protect American producers, in an effort to assure that free trade is fair to our farmers," said National Farmers President Gene Paul.

The FSA adminstrator also took issue with industry concentration, from railroads to livestock operations. "Secretary Glickman believes strongly that it is the government's role to assure a level playing field at home as well as abroad," Weber said. "As agriculture becomes more dependent on the market, the forces of competition must work."

Four companies account for 87 percent of all red meat slaughter and processing in the U.S. "Never before in the history of agriculture has America seen so much market power in so few hands," Paul said. "It is time today to focus a positive effort on returning competition to the markets."

Weber said the USDA will continue to work with its committee on livestock concentration. "We are concerned about concentration wherever we see it," Weber said. And, he pointed to the inequity in the unusually wide difference between the price farmers receive for their production, and the price American consumers pay for their food at the supermarket.

The farm bill was passed on April 4, 1996, but the FSA and USDA greeted it with questions and doubt. "Although this particular piece of legislation provided much-needed planting flexibility, we believe it fell short of providing an adequate safety net," Weber said. He added that President Bill Clinton hopes to revisit that issue, although it is unclear whether the farm bill would be addressed again.

"Dairy is a program that I believe was short-changed in the 1996 act," Weber said. "In essence, the dairy price support program is phased out after 1999 ... the more immediate problem is that since October wholesale prices have plummeted by 52 percent for butter and over 25 percent for cheese."

From September to November, the pay price to producers dropped about $4 per hundredweight. "This is the largest two-month decline on record," Weber said.

"We're very concerned about this rapid and sharp decline in dairy prices, and the secretary is in the process now of reviewing what in his arsenal he has that can help," Weber said. The USDA can work to increase exports through reactivating certain programs and increasing exports under others. But under current law, the assistance USDA can provide is limited, he explained.

Animal Lovers Can Avoid Wasted Donations:

Direct Gifts To Local Animal Shelters

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — It's that time of year again . . . when mailboxes are filled with pleas for donations to animal welfare groups. Many generous Americans who donate money to national animal organizations will be shocked to learn that very little of that money will actually be spent on the welfare of animals.

The huge national animal rights groups — the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS), People for the Ethical Treatment of animals (PETA), Doris Day Animal League, The Fund for Animals and others — will spend millions of dollars mailing end-of-the-year pleas for money. Americans generously respond to poignant stories about needy animals and appealing pictures of kittens and puppies, but the sad truth is that only a small fraction of the money collected will be used to help abandoned cats and dogs.

The Humane Society of the United States, the country's largest animal advocacy organization, will raise $40 million this year. Only token grants — usually less than $500 each — will be given to a handful of animal shelters. Millions of dollars will be spent on staff salaries and benefits for HSUS executives, with much of the donations used for more fund-raising efforts. People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals and other top money-generating animal rights groups disburse their donated funds in similar ways.

How can an animal lover be sure a donation is actually used to help animals? Pennsylvanians for the Responsible Use of Animals (PRUA) urges recipients to send donations directly to their local private or municipal animal shelters. These animal aid facilities provide food, housing, rescue services and medical attention to animals that need it most.

The shelter workers, assisted by volunteers, are busy providing services and don't have the sophisticated fund-raising tactics of the national groups. Donations from local residents will make a difference for abandoned and stray animals. Animal shelters truly need financial help, and PRUA says donors are more assured that their gifts will be appreciated and used locally for animal welfare.

PRUA is a coalition of 17 associations and many individuals representing agriculture, biomedicine, entertainment, sports and hunting groups. The umbrella organization encourages humane treatment of animals used for food, clothing, biomedical research, entertainment and sport while at the same time strongly supporting Pennsylvanians' right to the continued, responsible use of animals. The coalition also provides factual information to the public, the media, elected officials and those responsible for animal care so they can have a better understanding of proper care standards.

Information about PRUA is available by contacting PRUA Executive Director Lowell Wilson, 862 Webster Drive, State College, PA 16801.

Though she loves going to the Farm Show now, Michelle had some qualms about the whole thing the first year she entered. She was about eight, and found herself in the washroom, cleaning up her heifer next to the giant and frighteningly heavy feet of some Clydesdale horses towering over her head.

With heir hectic 3X milking schedule, Leroy, Brenda and Greg will be kept busy at home most of the week just keeping up with the daily chores. But they do usually arrange some help so they can at least all take part as a family on show day.

"We're really thankful to family, friend and neighbors for all the help they've been to us," says Brenda, of the assistance they've received over the years with everything from cattle shows to moving onto the farm. "And most of all, we'd like to give credit to God, for all that has happened to enable us to be farming on our own."

samples. The milk urea a.m. and the milk urea p.m. represents samples taken on sample day and analyzed for urea concentration.

Mean value for blood urea, milk urea a.m., milk urea p.m., and DHIA milk urea were very similar.

Blood levels were 91% of the DHIA milk urea concentration (SE=.014).

The milk urea a.m. was lower than the milk urea p.m. by about 2 mg/dl (.856xMUN p.m.) (SE=.009). We would expect the milk urea in the afternoon to be higher than the morning due to the fact that we feed at 11 a.m. The average of the a.m. and the p.m. milk MUN is 13.1; very close to the average of DHIA milk urea of 12.9.

Standard deviations are very similar for the different tests. The DHIA MUN has the highest SD 2.9 compared to 2.4, 2.5 and to 2.9 from milk a.m. and p.m. samples and blood tests from the clinical laboratory.

The range in urea values is similar across the different tests, but note the low of 2.3 for the DHIA MUN test and the high of 23.0. The range of the DHIA MUN is wider than the clincial lab's values.

The same conclusions about a herd concerning MUN could be made from any of the tests. The mean and standard deviation are similar for all tests.

On two of our monthly tests, the MUNs were outside the range of 10 to 14 mg/dl for the herd. One test was associated with higher protein content of the ration above what was needed and one test was when haylage was very moldy and feed intake dropped significantly. Therefore, we can use these mean values to "flag" a feeding program.

Urea values from NBC dairy with milk and feed intake. Milking at 5 a.m. and 4 p.m. Blood collected at 2 p.m. Feeding at 11 a.m. and small top-off at 4 p.m.

In Conclusion

Milk urea may be a useful test for diagnosing herd problems and identifying opportunities to improve protein supply. However, one word of caution: milk urea may be within acceptable ranges of 10 to 14 but protein may still not be adequately balanced. Finally, milk urea should never be interpreted without evaluating the entire feeding management program.

Years Of Successful Poultry Breeding For Roland Romig

Even though Romig describes himself as a semi-retired poultry producer, birds that can be directly traced to his flock are still winning at the shows.

"The man who had the largest number of exhibitor points last year in the American Poultry Association is Lyle Nole from Green Bay, Wisconsin. A number of the (birds) he won with were my birds," Romig said.

Because of a new line in the Farm Show rules which states that all birds shown must be housed in Pennsylvania, Romig will not compete at the Farm Show this year. However, he hopes that in future years he will again be able to take part in the show.

In his many years of showing, Romig has had numerous champions in many different breeds and varieties.

"A few years ago I had grand champion chicken at the Farm Show and had my picture taken with Boyd Wolfe when he was secretary of agriculture. That was a highlight," Romig said.

His success can be attributed to three important factors, Romig said.

First, he would get the best breeders he could find.

"I know where the good breeders are nationwide. A lot of the times, people will only buy birds for breeding purposes that are within a reasonable distance. I bought wherever I could find them."

Next in Romig's recipe for winning is to specialize in breeds that other people don't have.

"I have bred everything that is in the American Standard of Perfection, which is the guidebook and standard by which poultry is bred," Romig stated.

Romig has also helped develop some of the varieties, including the Salmon Favoralle. A few years ago, there were very few of this variety in existence. Now, largely because Romig bred many and sold them, the variety is gaining in popularity.

"There was a well-known judge from England over here a few years ago that saw my Red Sussex — which I was the only breeder that I knew of that bred Red Sussex — and he said mine were better than what they had in England."

The third reason for his success is attributed to experience.

"I know what to breed with what, to get the good quality. That just comes from years of experience. There's no way you can get that in a short period of time," he said.

"You don't read that out of a book, though there are some good books, a lot of it just has to be years of experience."

Just what makes a prize poultry exhibit?

Romig explained that first on the list is type.

"Within each particular variety, you're looking first of all for type. Then you go for color. But of course one of the big things that you take into consideration at a show is the condition of a bird; if they're clean and in good feather," he said.

According to Romig, the Pennsylvania Farm Show is kind of a combination of a show and fair.

At fairs, they're generally interested more in a display of poultry, where a poultry show is interested in extremely good quality, not such a big quantity.

"One of the reasons I showed more at fairs than at shows was that I needed some income to feed this humongous flock of birds, and you get prize money when you're showing at the fairs," he said.

Additional income was attained from his flock by the sale of chicks, ducklings, eggs and breeders. Exhibiting at a fair often generates interest from buyers looking for birds to show, for meat, or just to have a flock in the back yard.

One other role of the purebred poultry industry is to supply commercial growers with new bloodlines.

"Most commercial flocks are cross breeds and occasionally they need some purebred poultry to strengthen their gene pools," Romig said.

Not only is Romig a veteran poultry breeder, promoter and showman, his is also actively involved in the Pennsylvania Poultry Partners. Currently he serves as president of that organization.

"That's an organization mainly of poultry exhibitors and we've tried to draw different clubs together. There are five different clubs across the state," he said.

The clubs are the Central Pennsylvania Avian Club, Uniontown, Butler Association, Berks and York. Each of the five clubs hosts its own poultry show.

Romig is also a volunteer judge at various shows and has volunteered his services at many poultry auctions.

Romig also is a strong promoter of poultry and is always willing to help people get started in the business.

"Anytime anybody wants to get a few birds, I say, 'Get the best there are,'" Romig said.

"They tell me what they're interested in. A lot of times I will show them the American Standard of Perfection and say, 'See what catches your eye, and I know where those birds can be found.'

"I guess one of the sad things is that there are some (varieties) you just can't find."

With the help of Romig and other breeders, however, the many breeds and varieties of poultry will persist and, as Romig hopes, the keeping of backyard poultry will once again become commonplace.

National Farmers Union Calls For Propane Price Investigations

DENVER, Colo. — National Farmers Union (NFU) President Leland Swenson asked for government inquiries into the recent price hikes in propane gas.

"Rural America deserves answers on the issue of drastic increases in propane prices in recent months. Propane is an important source of energy for farmers and rural citizens. We use it to heat our home, dry our crops and power many other agricultural implements."

NFU is urging congressional hearings on propane supplies and prices. Swenson also called for Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman to initiate an analysis of the impact skyrocketing prices have on the production agriculture sector.

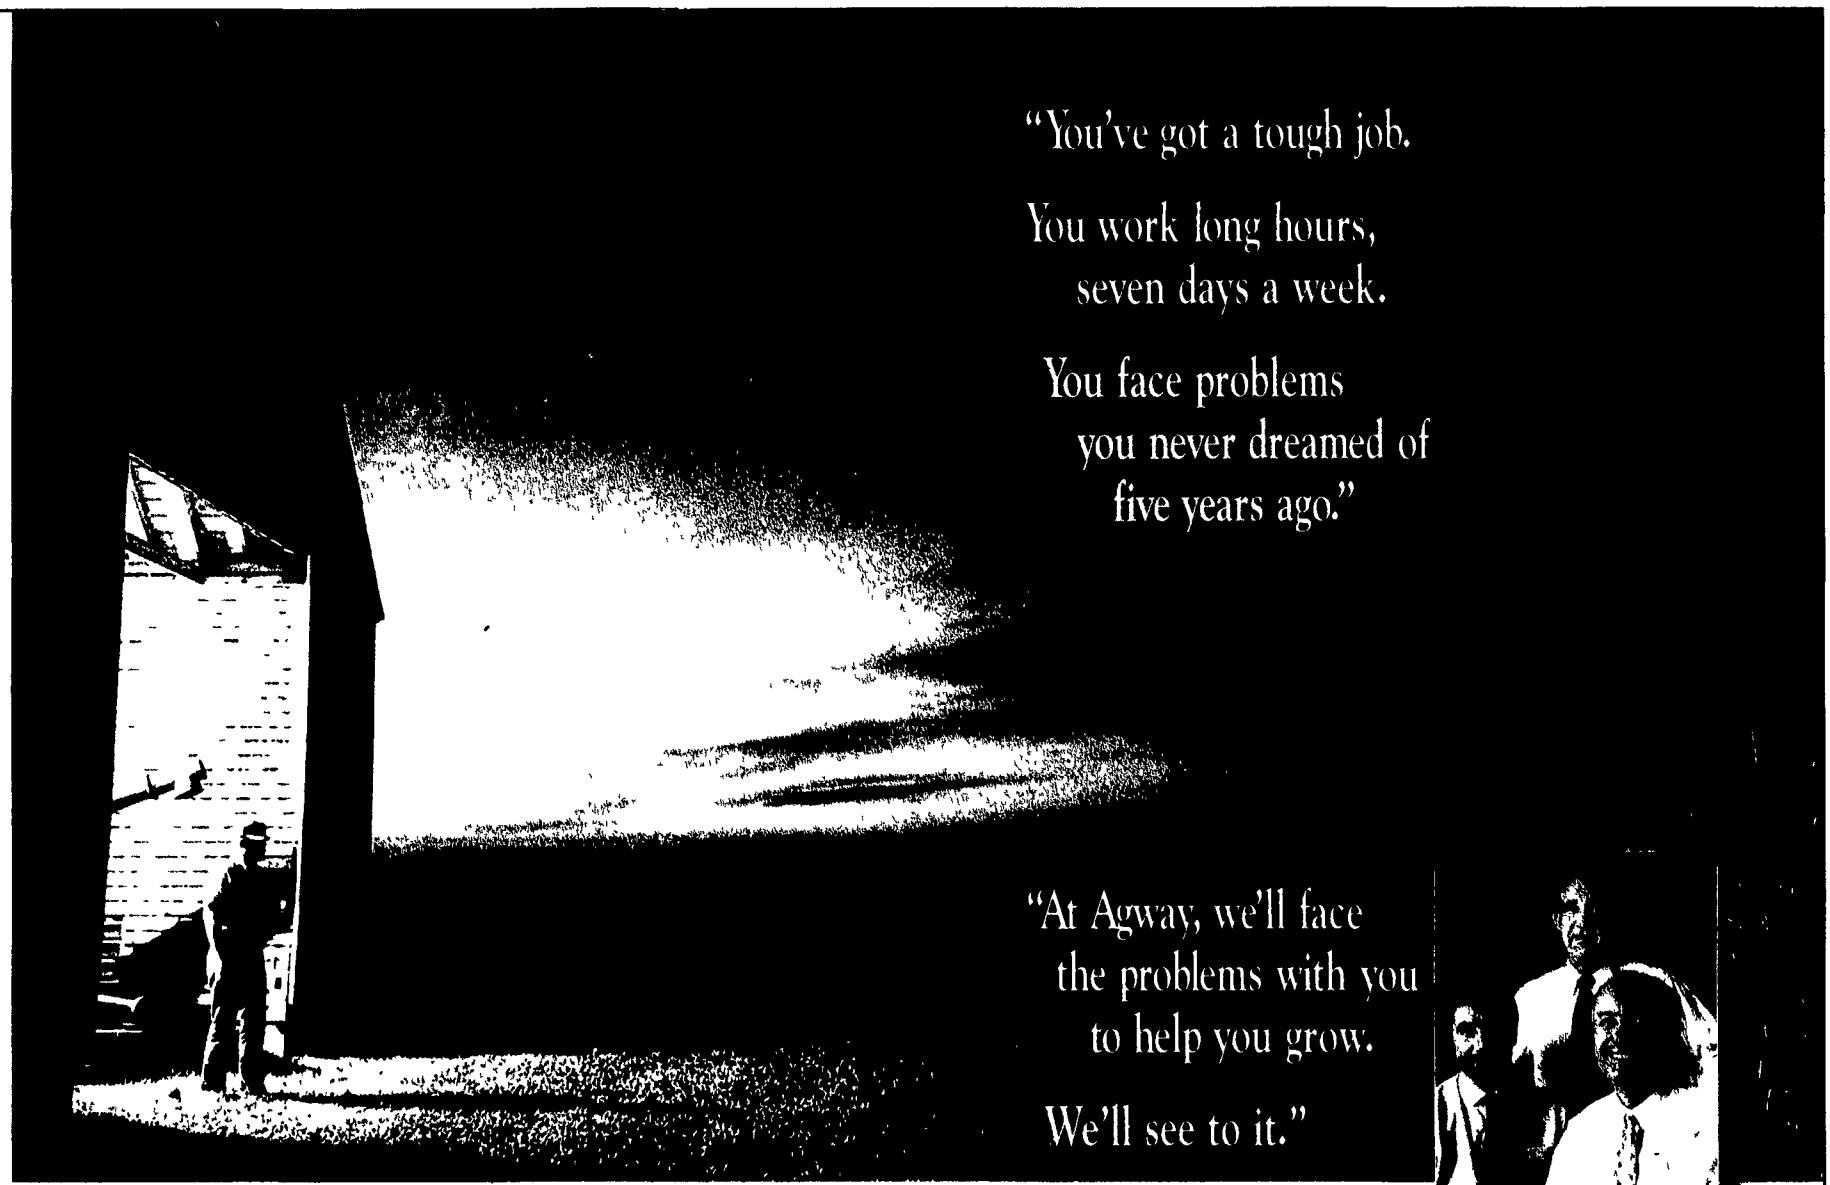
Additionally, the organization is urging a Justice Department investigation of possible antitrust violations in the energy sector.

"We are also concerned with recent congressional attempts to eliminate domestic home heating assistance programs for the needy," stated Swenson. "We urge continuation and full funding of these vital programs."

On a related item, NFU recently requested the removal of propane from the list of approved alternative motor fuels included in the clean air bill.

"Propane supplies are not infinite. The recent price hikes in propane prices illustrate the delicate balance of supply and demand of this vital commodity." remarked Swenson.

"There are many other more appropriate alternative fuels which can be utilized to meet federal clean air requirements, such as grain based ethanol and its derivatives."



"You've got a tough job.
You work long hours, seven days a week.
You face problems you never dreamed of five years ago."
"At Agway, we'll face the problems with you to help you grow.
We'll see to it."
